Shock for Dublin Castle
The King to the Pope
"She Lived Apart"
Why Not Ham and Eggs?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

In a few days, Griffith, the fighting Irishman, whose courage has had so much to do with freeing Ireland, will occupy Dublin Castle. There is a change for you, after seven hundred years. It will probably be hard for Griffith to realize that he is awake, not dreaming, when he enters the old castle as head of the Irish government.

The world changes, slowly. Before Shakespeare's time Henry the Eighth was taking property belonging to Catholics in England. The Pope had refused to give him the divorce he wanted. A little later Catholics were burned, hanged and hunted in England, and to say "Papist." was like saying "mad dog," only worse.

Later the burning and hanging stopped, but a Catholic could not be a member of Parliament. Even to this day, no member of the British royal family could legally marry a Catholic.

But on Thursday King George telegraphed to the Pope, "I thank Your Holiness for the warm message which afforded me sincere gratification."

The Pope had congratulated the King on giving freedom to Ireland.

Mr. Thomas W. Lamont, of Morgan & Company, has decided at last, that, as a newspaper editor he is a pretty good banker, and has sold the New York Evening Post.

Not unkindly, you might say of the Evening Post under banking management, what the London Telegraph said about Mr. Bennett's "New York Herald in London," when that interesting paper gave up the ghost.

"She lived apart and few might know when Lucy ceased to be."

To attract attention, what happens must be "new." Buried inside the paper you see "Three go to the electric chair." Ordinarily you would pass on. We are hardened to the horrible brutality that prostitutes science and electric power to official killing.

But a minor headline catches your eye, "The murderers chose chicken, potatoes, asparagus, sponge cake and coffee for their last meal." That shocks you. You ask yourself, "Why did they not choose ham and eggs, as well-regulated murderers always do." And for a moment you meditate—not on the killing by electricity, but on the absence of ham and eggs at the last breakfast.

Luther Boddy, colored, went to war, fought for his country, came back, shot and killed two detectives that arrested him. He said he had been arrested before and "kicked around for two or three hours in the police station," and was tired of it.

Boddy's mother, described as "an old mammy," but apparently a person of considerable sense, says "the trouble is, they take boys into the army and teach them it is all right to kill other boys. Then they get into trouble."

You are not surprised when an old lady dies, leaving $140 in an old china jar. But you are surprised when Senator Boies Penrose leaves $229,100 in cash in his safe deposit vault. There were ten thousand dollar bills, one thousand dollar bills, and smaller bills down to fifty dollars.

Money "talks," but it does not answer questions and doesn't tell where it came from, or why it was hoarded. No one will ever know why Senator Penrose kept all that money loose in a box, drawing no interest. If an intelligent United States Senator does it, how many little people do it? Wouldn't it be a good thing, as Mr. Hays has suggested, to have an intelligently-managed system of saving that, paying a decent rate of interest, to bring all that money out of hiding?

Can it be that Senator Penrose expected some great crash, and intended to have actual cash on hand?

In the United States are one million addicts, according to a report to the Secretary of the Treasury. One drug fiend is as bad as five drunkards, therefore the situation should interest prohibitionists. If they can find a way to abolish drugs the country will be much obliged. And if they try it, may they be more successful than they have been in abolishing whiskey.

It would be a good thing if those that legislate for human beings UNDERSTOOD human beings. Man has been a thinking animal for a few thousand years only. He seeks relief from thought, and will have it. The least harmful relief is tobacco, next light wine and beer, next whiskey, and worst of all drugs.

The difficulty seems to be that while you easily suppress heroin tobacco, light wine and beer, hard to hide, it is practically impossible to get rid of whiskey, easily transported, absolutely impossible to get rid of drugs, a man can carry enough in his overcoat pocket to ruin a thousand families.

You are told that capillary contraction is the one force irresistible. Interest on money is irresistible. In 1842 H. D. Hawkins owed Joseph Marshall seven dollars and six cents. He didn't pay. They are both dead. Now the Surrogates Court in New York decides that the estate of Hawkins must pay the estate of Marshall $890. From $7 to $890 in less than one hundred years is considerable expansion. Moral: save your money, put it out at interest, then put the interest out at interest. If you do it thoroughly the result will ruin your children, by making them rich.

CLEW TO GIRL IN LOUD CASE

May Abandon Leviathan Plans

PLEA FOR SMALLER SHIPS

Government Urged to Put Mount Vernon and Agamemnon Into Service

The United States Shipping Board is considering the advisability of laying up the Leviathan indefinitely and reconditioning instead the steamships Agamemnon and Mount Vernon.

The Mount Vernon is in this port and the Agamemnon is in Brooklyn. Preliminary inspection of both vessels was made last Wednesday and a rough estimate of the cost of refitting them has been placed at $2,500,000 for the two, or less than half the expenditures that is called for on the Leviathan refitting.

Considerable opposition has arisen in American shipping circles toward the investment of $7,000,000 in just one ship, when it was realized that the Leviathan would probably be operated by the International Mercantile Marine in conjunction with the British giant ships Majestic, Homeric and Olympic.

It is pointed out that the Leviathan can only be operated profitably during eight months of the year, whereas if the Agamemnon and Mount Vernon were refitted and placed in service they could be operated all the year round economically and provide a regular weekly service carrying mails and passengers by being operated in conjunction with the steamships George Washington and America of the United States lines.

With the George Washington sailing next month on a cruise to the Mediterranean, the America is left alone to maintain an American flag

HAYS TO ACCEPT $150,000 PICTURE JOB

Washington, Jan. 14.—Postmaster-General Will H. Hays will resign from the Cabinet in the near future to accept a $150,000 offer with a group of moving picture interests, it was announced at the White House at noon today.

LIGHT SNOW DUE LATE TONIGHT OR SUNDAY

Predictions for a light fall of snow late tonight and Sunday with warmer weather tonight is the official forecast of the weather bureau, for the next twenty-four hours. The snow is due to a disturbance which is central near Winnipeg and which is moving towards Boston. It was zero at Northfield, Vt., which was the coldest spot in the country, and 58 at Key West, the highest. The lowest for Boston was 28 at 5, 6, 7 and 8 a. m.

15 LYNN MEN INDICTED IN AUTO THEFT PLOT

Sixteen indictments charging conspiracy to steal automobiles have been returned against fifteen residents of Lynn and one Boston man by the Essex County Grand Jury. Charges of conspiracy to obtain insurance money on stolen machines are also made against the defendants. The leaders of the alleged band were said by the police to have been Andrew and Thomas Horne of Lynn and Estwick Coolidge, Warren street, Roxbury.

DE VALERA BOLT ON TREATY

Refuses to Join in Peace Approval by the South Ireland Parliament

Dublin, Jan. 14 (By the Associated Press).—The Anglo-Irish Treaty creating the Irish Free State was unanimously ratified today by the South Ireland Parliament. Eamon De Valera and his supporters, who opposed the treaty in the Dail Eireann, were absent.

A provisional government was constituted, comprising Michael Collins, William Cosgrave, Eamon J. Duggan, P. J. Hogan, Finian Lynch, Joseph McGrath, Professor John MacNeill and Owen O'Higgins.

UNIONISTS ATTEND.

The Parliament met under Clauses 17 and 18 of the Anglo-Irish treaty, which made the members of the Southern Irish Parliament elected under the government of Ireland Act of 1920 the body which should ratify the treaty and take measures for constituting a provisional government.

The meeting was held in the oak room of the Mansion House. The entire list of 128 members, including the four Unionists elected for Trinity College, had been summoned, but only those who favored the treaty attended.

The agenda contained a resolution calling for ratification of the treaty and further resolutions appointing eight ministers to comprise the provisional governing body. The list, which was duly ratified by the meeting, is identical with the list of the ministers of the Dail Eireann, with the addition of Professor John MacNeill, Speaker of the Dail, and Finian Lynch, who was one of the secretaries of the London delegation.

The list of ministers does not include Arthur Griffith, President of the Dail, nor George Gavan Duffy, the Dail's Minister of Foreign Affairs, presumably because foreign affairs, although they will be within the competence of the Free State when constituted, will not be formally handled by the provisional transitional government.

Pierce Beasley of Gerry formally moved the resolution approving the treaty, with Joseph McBride of Mayo, brother of Major John McBride who was executed after the Easter week rising in 1916, seconding the motion.

McBride said the treaty was demanded by an overwhelming majority of the people of Ireland and was for the benefit of the country.

GRIFFITH ASKS SUPPORT.

Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, addressing the meeting, said he thought it desirable to make definite what the position was of the Provisional Government that had been

12 SAVED AT WEST END BLAZE

Sick Man and Children Carried Down Over Ladders at Brighton Street Fire

Twelve persons, including a man sick in bed and several young children, were rescued by firemen and policemen today from suffocation from dense smoke which rolled through the four-story brick building at No. 70 Brighton street, West End, during a fire which started in the basement.

Samuel Sitowitch, who was ill, was overcome as he attempted to leave his bed. Groping through the house, Patrolman Philip Schuman, who discovered the fire, and Samuel Pope, driver for District Fire Chief Edward J. Shallow, and Ladderman John Buckley came upon Sitowitch.

They broke a window in his room and passed the unconscious man through it to a house adjoining. Sitowitch was later taken to the Relief Hospital.

Patrolman Schuman and Driver Pope were nearly overcome by smoke themselves, but managed to remain on duty.

Members of Ladder 1 raised several ladders on the front of the building and in an alleyway at one side. Captain Lafley and Ladderman Callaghan, Doughtery, Russell, Bradley and Leary went up the ladders and either carried down in their arms or led down the smoke-filled stairways the other occupants of the house.

From the fourth floor they rescued Mrs. Helen Polonk and her children, Stella, Olga and Stephanie. On the second floor they found Frances Nowsuk, forty years old.

Rose, Frances, Paul and Stefa Sitowitch were taken from the second floor after their father had been rescued. On the first floor were Mrs. Stefa Patrick and her daughter, Mary, eighteen years old.

The fire started in an unoccupied portion of the basement, from a cause not determined. It caused $2,000 damage. Patrick Collins of Leverett street is owner of the building.

Young Woman Whose Mysterious Death Is Being Investigated by the Police.

MISS ANNIE GREALISH

Following a late party, where there had been drinking, Miss Grealish returned to her rooming house on Brookline avenue. Feeling ill, she took a tablet and went to bed with her landlady, Mrs. Lillian Laskey. Two and one-half hours later Mrs. Laskey discovered that the young woman was dead.

WAKES TO FIND COMPANION DEAD IN BED

Autopsy Ordered in Mysterious Death of Annie Grealish

Following an all night party, "somewhere in the vicinity of Elliot street," Miss Annie Grealish, sometimes known as Anna M. Harton, and the "Irish Queen," was found dead in her bed today.

Her body has been turned over to the medical examiner for an autopsy and the police are investigating.

An autopsy will be held to determine whether she died of natural causes or was poisoned.

Miss Grealish lived with Mrs. Lillian Laskey at No. 274 Brookline avenue, Back Bay. Mrs. Laskey told the police that Miss Grealish came home about 2:30 this morning. She said that she had been to a party in the vicinity of Elliot street and had been drinking. She felt sick and took a tablet and went to bed with Mrs. Laskey.

About 5 o'clock this morning Mrs. Laskey awoke and spoke to her companion. Receiving no reply she put her hand on Miss Grealish, and was horrified to find that the young woman was dead. She called in Dr. John

TUNNEL TIEUP CAUSES DELAY TO THOUSANDS

Block System in Dorchester Tube Fails to Work at Height of Rush Hour

The block signal system in the Dorchester tunnel went out of commission today and resulted in a quarter-hour delay to traffic just as the rush hour was reaching its height.

Thousands of people poured into the Andrew square terminal and the Broadway station in South Boston to come into the city.

Other thousands crowded the Cambridge stations, as the tieup extended itself by reason of the trains being unable to complete the circuit.

Workmen were rushed to repair the signal system, but a quarter of an hour elapsed before the trains were got under way again. The first trains that came into the city in both directions after the system was put in commission again were packed to suffocation.

The crowds in the stations milled about the doors of the trains and were handled with difficulty by the trainmen. No serious accidents occurred.

ANOTHER WOMAN IS SOUGHT AS WITNESS

Firearms Expert in Sacco-Vanzetti Trial to Go on Stand at Cambridge

New and important information which may lead to the identification of the woman supposed to have been with Clarence W. Loud the night the State charges he shot and killed Patrolman James A. Preston of Wakefield was placed in the hands of the Middlesex County authorities today.

It is believed that this young woman may be the "Alice Donnett" whose name was found entered near that of Loud and opposite a statutory charge in Preston's diary the night the officer was shot.

Investigation of the "tip" was immediately begun and may result sensationally before Loud's trial on a murder charge in East Cambridge Superior Court goes much further.

A woman who became violently ill shortly after Clarence W. Loud was arrested charged with Preston's slaying is sought.

"She has been one of Loud's friends, her acquaintances say.

The District Attorney's office at East Cambridge does not say she was herself the woman with Loud the night of April 9—the night of the shooting on Lowell street in Wakefield.

BURRELL TELLS OF FLEEING SHOTS ON PRESTON MURDER NIGHT

WITNESS IN SACCO-VANZETTI CASE TO TELL OF WOUNDS

But it is believed that she can tell a story which will do much to satisfy the prosecution as to Loud's actual movements that night and the credibility or lack of it that his story of his movements possesses.

Today marked the appearance of expert witnesses in force. One of these called was Captain Van Amburgh, witness in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, to testify as to gunshot wounds in general and those on Patrolman Preston's body after the baffling events of the night of April 9 in particular.

The State's introduction of expert testimony began today when Dr. Roscoe D. Perley of Melrose, medical examiner for the district which includes Wakefield, was called to the stand.

Dr. Perley told of a superficial examination of Preston's body and then of an autopsy. Attorney Feeney pointed at a controversy over this testimony when he asked District Attorney Saltonstall to treat these examinations separately.

Dr. Perley said he saw several wounds on Preston's face, neck and chest, and blood poured freely from the latter. He also examined Loud's wounds, finding a cut on the back of his head and bruises on the forehead, one of which was sensitive to the touch.

Former State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell testified that about 11 p. m. on the night of April 9 he was shot at as he was driving his brother's car between Melrose and Saugus. A car between Melrose and Saugus. A big car was standing in the road with its headlights focused his way. He could not tell if the men he saw were holdup men or policemen. He refused to obey a signal to stop.

GUNSMITH IS WITNESS.

Mrs. Loud and her son, Richard, were not in court when today's session opened. Two little boys, nephews of John P. Feeney, were interested spectators. They were ordered to remain at Mr. Feeney's request.

Ernest C. Schmidt of Boston, a gunsmith, testified that about two or three years ago he did some work on a .45 calibre single-action Colt revolver for Loud. Mr. Schmidt said that he had loosened the "pull" on the trigger for Loud.

Feeney showed him one of the two Colt .45's owned by Loud. The witness said the gun looked like the one he had fixed for Loud, but that they all looked alike. Mr. Feeney had him show how the gun was worked. The slow how the gun was worked. The slow stages had to be pulled back before trigger had to be pulled back before it could be fired. The weapon was then pulled back and not unlike a horse pistol, and was about a foot long.

After the demonstration, the District Attorney wanted to know if it might be put in as evidence. Feeney said he would have it marked and that the District Attorney might have the use of it whenever he wished.

SHOT AT BURRELL.

Former State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell said that, on the night of April 9, between Melrose and Saugus, he was shot at. Burrell was in a car. There was a big car standing at the road with its headlights focused his way. He was unable to make out if they were hold-up men or police officers. Someone beckoned for him to stop and someone held up a gun. He stepped on the accelerator and sped by them. When he got to a place where he could telephone, he called up both the Melrose and Saugus police and related the circumstances to them. The time was about 11 p. m.

Feeney asked him if he knew the number of the car he was driving that night. He said that he did not remember it, as it was his brother's car. Feeney asked him not to get the number of the car for him and let him know.

Byron Pierce of Atkinson said that he had known Loud for the past ten years. He and Loud had discussed guns together.

"What do you want to show?" asked Feeney.

"I want to show that he was familiar with guns and——"

"And that he was a good shot?" asked Feeney.

"Yes," replied the district attorney.

"I will submit that he got to be familiar with Colt .45 revolvers, and that he is a first-class marksman with these revolvers," said Feeney.

SHORTENS STATE'S CASE.

After this admission by Mr. Feeney, the witness left the stand. This shortened the case, as the admission gave the district attorney a chance to drop several witnesses along this line.

The district attorney said he would like to have Mr. Feeney agree to certain bits of glass from the mirror Loud said he was carrying to a man in Lynnfield the night of the murder. This glass was found near Cedar Rock, where the sedan was abandoned. Mr. Feeney was disposed to give the district attorney a chance to look over certain exhibits which he wanted Mr. Feeney to agree to.

After recess, the District Attorney came in with some pieces of glass and a list of the mirror frame found by two boys. Mr. Feeney was willing they should be admitted. Then two more witnesses were made unnecessary.

Patrolman John G. Gates of Wakefield was the next witness. He said Officer Preston was a friend of his. On April 9 he pulled in a duty call in Wakefield square at 9:25 p. m. He later went to Pole 17-7 on Lowell street, saw Preston's body lying there and described how the body lay in the street. He said Preston's cap was on when he saw him.

Feeney stated he would not contend the body lay in any other manner than the State's witnesses had said. Feeney said his only contention was that the cap might have been off at the time.

Gates said he saw the witnesses, Libby, Rodney and Harper, and talked with them that night. Gates said that he went to the Melrose police.

BULLET IDENTIFIED.

The rear number plate on Loud's car (1921) was shown to the witness. Gates illustrated how the number plate hung from the car that night when the car was found. The plate sagged slightly to the left.

A bullet, found by Sidney G. Adams of Wakefield, turned over to the District Attorney, was shown to Gates. The District Attorney called the bullet the "Adams bullet." Gates identified it.

On cross-examination Gates said he did not mark the bullet for identification. Gates said he had "memorized" certain characteristics of the bullet, so to speak. He referred to one long chip on one side and two long chips on the other.

The State's medical testimony began when Dr. Roscoe D. Perley of Melrose, medical examiner for the district which includes Wakefield, was called.

He testified he was notified of the death of Officer Preston between 9 and 10 p. m. April 9. He took the first train he could get for Wakefield, and was driven to the scene of the shooting in an automobile. There was a blanket over the body when he got there. He said the officer's cap was on. He did not see the body, as it was wrapped in the blankets. A man named Lee Anderson drove him to the scene of the shooting and back. There was some delay on the way back, about fifteen minutes, owing to trouble with the car.

When he got to the first-aid room at the Wakefield police station, the body was lying on its back on the operating table. He made a superficial examination that night and performed an autopsy the next morning.

PERLEY DESCRIBES WOUNDS.

Feeney hinted that there might be a controversy over this testimony and asked the District Attorney to treat both examinations by the medical examiner separately.

Dr. Perley said he saw several wounds on the face, neck and chest of the dead man and blood poured freely from the latter.

He saw an opening in the left shoulder of the coat, the edge of which was singed. There was a wound in the left side. Upon removing the officer's clothing he said he found a bullet in the folds of his undershirt just over the left breast of the dead man.

Dr. Perley said Dr. McLeod of Melrose had taken his dictation at the autopsy. Dr. McLeod was then wanted the State to call Dr. McLeod.

Dr. Perley told of a cut on the back of Loud's head and bruises on the forehead.

Dr. Perley was asked to step down from the stand in order that one of the State's witnesses who was anxious to get away might take the stand.

Augustus M. Simmers of Weymouth, a printer, a man who once had a camp in Wakefield with Loud, told how on one occasion he had seen Loud "fanning" a .45-calibre Colt revolver. This "fanning" is done by snapping back the trigger on a weapon with the palm of the hand and causing rapid firing of a single-action pistol. Mr. Feeney wanted to have him demonstrate with the Colt revolver. Feeney asked him to walk and upon Feeney's signal to fire it rapidly three times.

The District Attorney objected and the court refused to allow the demonstration. Then Feeney said he wanted to "know how fast he can shoot," said Judge Brown.

Mr. Feeney questioned Summers as to the rapidity with which a single-action, 45-calibre Colt could be fired. Summers was unable to state how fast it could be done.

COURT AGAIN REFUSES.

Feeney again insisted that the witness give a demonstration of how fast he, the witness, could shoot and again the court refused the request.

B. F. SHIBE, PRESIDENT OF ATHLETICS, DEAD

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—Benjamin F. Shibe, president of the Philadelphia American League baseball club, died today. Mr. Shibe, who was in his eighty-third year, had been ailing for about two years. the intends to cling to it and pay the immense sum of 8,000,000 pounds sterling exacted toward the upkeep of the British empire.

Five years from now, if the Southern government proves loyal and capable, Ulster would probably consider carefully a plan to go under the banner of the Irish free state, but the record of the new government would have to be very wonderful indeed for Ulster to accept it in the meantime, we are going ahead with a task which we should never have been asked to undertake, and now that we have started we intend to continue and make our government a model.

Citizens of the United States should remember:

First—We have never wanted to set up our own government and were forced to it in the interest of peace.

Second—An act of the Imperial Parliament set up in the form of government and outlined the exact boundaries as existing today.

Third—His Majesty the King further ratified that government and the boundaries when His Majesty opened the first session of the Ulster Parliament.

Fourth—The British government further ratified it with plenary powers and orders to transfer other powers within the next two months.

Fifth—Mr. David Lloyd George gave his solemn pledge that this government would not be interfered with except with our own consent.

Sixth—The imperial prime minister never said our consent to the change of program nor were we consulted in the making of the treaty which violated our pledged rights.

Were it a mere matter of detail, we would not object for everyone wants peace. But when we find written into the treaty a boundary commission which has power to strip Ulster of her territory we object. The Imperial Parliament gave us our territory and it was ratified by the cabinet and King.

That territory will be governed from Belfast until we know that the south is done to prove Ulster will not be coerced or her resources used to feed a government which does not desire to remain within the British empire—a government composed of men who refuse to take an oath of allegiance to the British crown.

The boundary question is the all important one with Ulster and it is a terrible penalty for our loyalty to the British empire. Attempts have been made to make light of this but the Prime Minister refused to give any assurance that the proposed commission would not take two large counties away from us. So we shall have nothing to do with it; we were not consulted about it and it violated the pledges made us.

Consequently we are going ahead with our government plans. My ministers will explain them to the several Services so that the people of the United States and Canada may know what kind of a government we propose to give and to what extent we intend to protect the minority. The world hear then Judge us.

service to Bremen. This means that American mails and the rates paid for their transportation by the Postoffice will go to foreign vessels.

Meantime reports that reached here today from Newport News, Va., indicate that the United States Fuel & Shipbuilding Company may not be able to take the steamship Leviathan off the dry dock there.

It is said that the Leviathan, to be handled safely, requires a minimum of thirty-seven feet of water and the pilots refuse to take her into Newport News unless that depth is available.

To deepen the channel will require drilling and blasting, as there is considerable rock in the way. Whether the expense of this operation and the time needed for the job will result in the Newport News company asking permission to withdraw its bid has not yet been decided.

PENALTY FOR DELAY.

The terms under which bids were invited by the United States Shipping Board included a heavy penalty clause for every day's delay in completing the work, after March 15, 1922. It has been estimated that the drilling and blasting necessary may occupy several months, as the work is apt to be interrupted by adverse weather.

If the Newport News Company is permitted to withdraw its bid the next lowest bidder would be the Tietjen & Lang subsidiary of the Todd Shipyards Corporation, which submitted a proposal to do the work for $7,890,000.

The Dail Eireann, he explained would remain in existence until the treaty's terms were carried out, when general elections would be called. The Provisional Government, he said, would need and deserve the support of every good Irishman.

TO CALL GENERAL ELECTION.

The brief meeting of the Southern Parliament's members was presided over by William Deroiste of Cork City, who was placed in nomination by Patrick O'Maley, member for Connemara, with Finian Lynch of Kerry seconding the nomination. Among the few privileged spectators was M. Blanche, the French consul.

The chairman announced that when the transition period was completed the Dail Eireann would decree a general election, enabling the people to pronounce on a form of constitution and elect representatives to the Parliament of the nation.

Reveal Irish "Invisible Army" in America

(Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.)

New York, Jan. 14.—An American division of the "invisible army" of Ireland is in existence and has been for more than two years, it was learned today by the International News Service.

Companies have been drilling regularly in cities throughout the United States under orders of the chiefs of the Irish Republican army and have been prepared for call to Ireland to take up arms without any inkling of their activities leaking out until now.

"Members of the invisible army" in the country number between 15,000 and 30,000, according to conservative estimates from authoritative sources.

The most amazing fact disclosed is that detachments sailed to Ireland from time to time without the knowledge of either the British or American authorities. It is known that four companies from Philadelphia got across and it is estimated that altogether between 2,000 and 3,000 members of the "invisible army" took side landed in Ireland and fought for the Irish Republic.

Fr. Dominic, Chaplain to MacSwiney, Released

London, Jan. 14.—Thirty Sinn Feiners, including the Rev. Father Dominic, Roman Catholic chaplain to the late Terrence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, were liberated from an English prison on the Isle of Wight today and will return to Ireland at once. They were freed under the recent royal proclamation of amnesty.

While MacSwiney was on hunger strike in Brixton Prison the Rev. Father Dominic visited him and said mass every morning.

JURY AWARDS $800 BALM TO TUCKER

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 14.—John E. Tucker, a Boston broker, was awarded $800 today by a jury in the Rockingham County Superior Court in his suit for $20,000 against his wife's parents, William C. and Leola A. French of New Britain, charging alienation of the affections of his wife, Frances. The jury was out seventeen hours.

Tucker admitted on the stand that he had met his wife but six times before they became engaged, but added that they had love letters. He also admitted that while enjoying the hospitalities of his wife's parents in New Britain he was going to bring suit. He was fishing and playing cards with Mr. French five days before the suit was filed, July 20, last.

The Tuckers were married November 15, 1918. Mrs. Tucker was formerly Mrs. Frances J. Pearce. Tucker was an instructor in a Southern training camp during the war.

Mrs. Tucker, called as a witness, said that she returned to her own parents' home and return to her husband because she was ill.

Y. M. C. A. PUTS 12 TO NEW DRINK CURE TEST

New York, Jan. 14.—The Young Men's Christian Association has sent twelve habitual drunkards, selected from thousands of inebriates treated at its Bowery branch, to take the cure at Fort Hamilton for the Inebriates at Mt. Vernon. It was found the ordinary methods of dealing with men afflicted by had liquor of the home brew variety were ineffective and the transfer to the new quarters was decided upon as an experiment.

EPISCOPAL BISHOP TO BE TRIED FOR HERESY

Rt. Rev. William M. Brown, retired Episcopal bishop of Arkansas, now living at Gallion, O., will be tried for heresy according to reports from Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Gailor, president of the Council of Protestant Episcopal Churches in this country.

Bishop Brown a few years ago came to Boston and stirred up a controversy over his opposition to admitting negro ministers into the fold of the Episcopal Church.

JURYMAN DROPS DEAD AT THE DEDHAM INN

William A. Armstrong of Holbrook, a juryman and foreman of the civil session of the Norfolk County Superior Court, dropped dead at the Dedham Inn as he was about to sit down to a meal with other members of the jury on which he was serving. Armstrong, who was seventy-two years old, reported for jury duty but a few hours

20 PER CENT. INCREASE IN WIRE PRODUCTION

Worcester, Jan. 14.—The local works of the American Steel & Wire Company are now operating on a basis of 60 per cent. normal production, according to District Manager Marshall. At the start of the year's average was 40 per cent. and that he expects business to increase gradually this Spring.

Neck Holds Barred in Dance Halls by Providence Police

Providence, Jan. 14.—Neck holds are barred in Providence by a new order of the police commissioners. No. not at wrestling matches, but at public dances.

So are divers other grips and catch - as - catch - can positions which may be perfectly right when employed by Strangler Sambo and Young Chokus on the mat, but are all wrong when practised by Gerald and Gwendolyn on the ballroom floor.

A young woman may no longer catch her male antagonist of the dance about the neck with both hands, while he swings her dizzily in the manner of the chipmunk glide. Not even when "both are members of this club."

The man running the dancehall will lose his license if they do.

9 SUBMARINES ARE DESTROYED AS TARGETS

Old U. S. Submersible Sunk by Destroyer Squadron Near Manila Bay

By Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Nine of Uncle Sam's old submarines have just ended their careers by serving as targets for the guns of the destroyer squadrons attached to the Asiatic fleet. A brief cablegram telling of the completion of the target practice which had been going on during the past two weeks was received today at the Navy Department.

The resting place of these obsolete submersibles is in the Pacific, outside Manila Bay. Weeks before the target tests were begun the work of disarming the old subs and taking everything of value off had been completed.

Eight of them had months ago been decreed worthless and placed out of commission.

Coincident with the passing of these old boats, early types of American-built submersibles, ten S-boats, some of them the best the navy has, have arrived at Cavite, Manila Bay, and have replaced them with the Asiatic fleet.

The safe arrival at Cavite marked the end of a journey of more than halfway around the world, from the submarine base at New London, Ct., down the Atlantic coast, through the Canal and across the Pacific, a distance of more than 13,000 miles.

SOLDIERS DIDN'T KNOW CROOK WAS LEAKING

Get First News of Transport's Mishap After It Arrives Safely in Port

New York, Jan. 14 (By the Associated Press).—A thousand doughboys returning today from Germany on the transport Crook learned for the first time that their ship had sprung leak last Tuesday and had been in danger during great gales that swept the North Atlantic.

"Not a crap game stopped," was the smiling comment of Captain Frank Repps as the Crook was being lashed to her pier at the transport base in Brooklyn. The transport St. Mihiel, which had been dispatched to her assistance, accompanied her up the bay.

The doughboys eagerly scanned the newspapers giving accounts of the plight of the Crook and many remarked that seasickness gave them more concern than anything else.

Captain Repps said that most of the crew of 140 were sent below decks to plug up opened seams. Some water leaked in and it was necessary to remove baggage. Care was taken to see that the water did not reach the coffins of 652 bodies of American soldiers on board.

The Crook's skipper was inclined to belittle the experience. He said some of the rivets had given away, causing the seams to open, but that at no time was there great danger.

In addition to the 918 enlisted men and the 50 casuals, the Crook brought fourteen German brides and eight babies.

RAPS FRELINGHUYSEN FOR LOSS OF 'WET' PETITION

Newark, N. J., Jan. 14.—Loss by United States Senator Frelinghuysen of a petition of 15,000 anti-prohibitionists calling on New Jersey's Senators and Representatives to work for modification of the Volstead enforcement act, drew a charge from William H. Stewart, president of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, today, that the Senator either had "dishonestly suppressed" the petition, or was guilty of such carelessness as rendered him "unworthy to be a member of the United States Senate."

NORRIS MAY BE PASTOR OF TREMONT TEMPLE

Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, the Texas Tornado evangelist who has been preaching the past fifteen days at Tremont Temple, may be the next pastor of the church. He has been asked to accept the pastorate.

Today Dr. Norris stated that he had been approached about accepting the call, but would not state whether he would accept.

Dr. Norris will leave for Fort Worth, Texas, his home, next week.

BACK PAY
By Fannie Hurst
The story of a girl with a "crepe de chine soul"

EIGHT YEARS
If a woman buys, with the oldest of her gifts, the silken, fragrant treasures of this world, will she be able to quiet the deep, living voice of conscience?
This is the vital question with which Back Pay deals.
Hester Bevins gives of her young womanhood to the small town until eight years have passed. Reminded, some time later in New York, that the "wages of sin is death," she says: "If sin has any wages, I've got a lot of Back Pay coming to me!"
Riverside Drive helps her to forget the small town but she never forgets Jerry Newcombe, the boy back home who loved her truly. And then, one day, there is Jerry's name, in the List of Severely Wounded.
Back Pay is not a story of the underworld.

NURSE ADMITS POSING AS WIFE OF CAPTAIN PRAY AT HIS OWN ORDER

DECEPTION WHILE IN SOUTH

Divorced "Hubby" Because Hours Didn't Jibe

HELEN LEE WORTHING

Brookline Beauty Also Says He Was Jealous of Her Larger Salary, and Refused to Be "the Pliant Partner"

By HAZEL CANNING

Helen Lee Worthing, Brookline beauty, divorced her husband because their hours didn't jibe.

That's one reason given by her to the Boston American.

Another reason was that economic jealousy of a man for his wife who makes more money than he does, burned too fiercely.

Last of all, Miss Worthing divorced her husband, Charles McDonald, chicago advertising man, because he wouldn't be "the pliant partner."

Now, the fact that Miss Worthing was married at all, was a surprise to her Boston friends. Though Miss Worthing was married in 1917, and was a countrywide beauty contest in 1919, at that time she was considered a simple, single, unattached maiden. But she wasn't. She was married all the time.

"It was better for us to part," Miss Worthing said today, "because I wouldn't yield, and Mr. McDonald couldn't."

So, in Suffolk Superior court, Miss Worthing got her divorce, on grounds of desertion and cruel and abusive treatment.

NEITHER WOULD YIELD.

"That," explains Miss Worthing, "I could stand any amount of cruel and abusive treatment. I could stand any number of black eyes, provided the proper balance was between us. But it wasn't. We each wanted to be boss, and neither would give way.

"In the perfect marriage, one or the other is subordinate; one or the other yields. First of all, Mr. McDonald and I came to odds over my hours. I go to work at quarter of twelve midnight, and am not through till after two. Mr. McDonald ordinarily goes to bed about the time I am starting for work. And I come joyously in, all thrilled and ready to make an evening of it, at 3 a. m., when he is getting his beauty sleep.

"I am pretty sleepy most mornings, till 1 in the afternoon. That means that I'm in no particular trim condition to preside at a breakfast table, in no condition to pick hairs from a husband's shoulder, before he goes out to earn a salary about one-third less than I earn. Hours played havoc in our household.

THE CROWNING INFAMY.

"But the salary question loomed large and forbidding. No man ever forgives his wife for making more money that he makes. Neither did my husband forgive me. The man may not show his jealousy openly. But it's true just the same. Now, the wise wife, very much in love, will give up her job, if she makes more than her husband. Or, at any rate, she'll lop off enough of her salary, when telling it, to make it less than his. But if she can't—then she raises up between herself and her husband a barrier stern, cruel, forbidding. And that worst jealousy of all, the jealousy of man for woman, as his economic rival, will come between them forever.

"But there were other things, very much unlike, with my marriage. The economic jealousy he had for me, not at all strong. But he did not mind it. I went to dinner with somebody else, nor if a thousand cavaliers sent me violets. My husband was too pleasingly platonic, in other words. He just once, he had blackened my eye, because I thought of some other man. I could have forgiven him everything, if he had loved me enough to be jealous of me—all would have been well. But not he.

STILL, FRIENDLY.

"Though I have divorced him, we still are just as friendly as two old women, knitting together by the fireside. We're just as friendly as two old gentlemen swapping stories. Should I ever get married again, Mr. McDonald would, right gladly, hand me the ring at the right time, to my second husband. And I would gladly pin the orange blossoms to the bridal cap of the second sweetie.

"The whole affair, between my husband and me, boils down to this: love love, but more than love, I love great life. I love great achievement—for women. There are two kinds of women, the good natured, dare-the-socks-for-life woman, and the woman who is her father's own daughter—and wants to go out and do things in the world, as her father did before her.

"I'm the last sort of girl. I'd rather make my way in a man's world than cook corned beef and cabbage for the handsomest Leu Tellegen of them all. Which is a conclusive reason why we should part."

'JILTED' BEAUTY TO SUE RICH WIDOW

Miss Hansen of Washington Plans Action Against Mrs. Roughan

Miss Marie C. Hansen, Washington pianist whose decision to file a breach of promise suit against Frank J. Allen of Boston disclosed the wedding of Allen and Mrs. Mary P. Roughan, wealthy widow of James Roughan of Boston, now threatens to sue the widow for alienation of Allen's affections.

The latest plan of the young Washington beauty, who declares Allen jilted her in order to wed Mrs. Roughan, who is reported to be more than twice his age, was revealed to a representative of the Boston American who called on Miss Hansen at her home in Washington.

"Frank has broken my heart," declared the young woman. "He deserted me practically at the altar. We had been engaged for ten years, during which time he showered me with tokens of his love and affection. Then he went to Boston and married a rich widow.

"We were engaged to be married last March. Just several days before the wedding was to have taken place Frank wrote me that he had decided not to marry me. He gave incompatability of temperament as the cause. It certainly took him a long time—ten years—to discover this incompatability of temperament.

JILTED FOR WEALTH.

"This allegation is all rot. He jilted me to marry the rich widow, no doubt preferring her money to me. He wasted the best part of my life. I believed in and trusted him when he left Washington to work in Boston. He bade me farewell and told me just as soon as he had settled he would send for me and we would be married. He might have kept his promise had he not met Mrs. Roughan, and I were engaged," declared Miss Hansen. "After Frank had gone to Boston he brought her here, introducing her to me as a 'close friend of the family.' He did not intimate that he intended to marry her."

Miss Hansen made the discovery of the marriage of Allen and Mrs. Roughan, she declares, when she learned they were stopping at the fashionable Wardman Park Inn at Washington, during the recent holidays. Immediately she says she started to take steps leading to a suit against Allen. Now she intimates that the wealthy widow will also be a defendant in another suit.

HOW RICH IS WIDOW?

While report has it that Mrs. Allen, formerly Mrs. Roughan, is very wealthy, many friends of the former widow scout the idea. One friend stated that in his opinion she is "practically broke except for the $5,000 a year income she derives from a trust fund." Court records show that she received $10,000 in cash and the yearly allowance of $5,000 by the will of her wealthy husband. At the death of her son George she received $171,646.40 as her share of the estate. According to friends of the former widow, the strange romance which resulted in the wedding of Mrs. Roughan to a man young enough to be her son, involved a struggle between friends in Boston, in which a stately Boston business woman, well in her fifties, was the third party.

This "other woman," friends say, was the woman who introduced Mrs. Roughan to the dapper young Allen, thus starting the romance that culminated in the quiet wedding last November in "The Little Church Around the Corner" in New York.

The other woman, friends say, was a friend of the Allen family in Washington. When young Allen came to Boston friends say she immediately took him under her wing and introduced him to many of her friends.

TWO OLD JULIETS.

Intimate friends assert the friendship of the business woman gradually grew into love. Then she introduced Allen to Mrs. Roughan, and according to an associate Mrs. Roughan and young Allen soon became good friends, much to the chagrin of the other woman.

A struggle ensued between the two women, over Boy, the catch par well on the road to seventy—for the love of the young man not yet thirty.

Came the marriage of Mrs. Roughan and Allen. Since then friends say the former widow and the business woman who made the romance possible are not been friends.

AGED MAN FOUND DEAD IN REAR OF SCHOOL

The body of an aged man was found early today in the rear of the Palmer School in Roxbury. The body was taken to the City Hospital, but the surgeons there said that the man had been dead for some time and the remains were then taken to the Southern Mortuary to await identification. The police description of the man gave his apparent age as sixty, his height as five feet and eight inches and his weight as 150 pounds. He had gray hair and mustache, blue eyes and was clothed in a blue serge suit and a black overcoat.

JURY ENTIRELY OF MEN MAY TRY ARBUCKLE

Only One Woman Left in Panel Now and Defence May Challenge Her

By International News Service.

San Francisco, Jan. 14.—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle may be tried the second time for manslaughter by a jury composed entirely of men. There were five women on the jury in the first trial.

If the defence decides to abandon hope of a mixed jury made as near as possible of an equal number of men and women, the jury likely will be completed today.

If Gavin McNab, chief counsel for the film comedian, holds to his determination to have a good representation of women on the jury, it may not be completed until some time next week.

When court convened today the count stood eleven to one, with Mrs. Mary Somers the sole feminine representative in the box. The defense removed by challenge two of the four who had been tentatively passed and the State one.

If the defence decides to submit the case to a jury composed largely of men, Mrs. Somers will be removed by peremptory challenge. But the probability existed that some of the men now in the box would be removed in an effort to get more women eligible for duty.

The prosecution retained today seven of its peremptory challenges and the defence three, almost enough to change the entire box. Should the task of selecting the jury be completed today, the taking of testimony will start Monday.

The State's case will require but three days for presentation and the defence will be materially shortened. It is expected, by the elimination of considerable expert medical testimony.

This will be possible through the report of a commission of experts on the condition of organs of the body of Virginia Rappe available for this trial. The first trial was over almost before they reported.

MRS. STILLMAN WORRIES RIVAL FORCES

Agents of Husband Invade Canada Preparing to Combat Her Divorce Offensive

By Universal Service.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 14.—While Mrs. Anne U. Stillman and her son, Bud, are tramping through the woods and along the St. Maurice, storing up energy for what they hope will prove the final legal blow at James A. Stillman, agents of the latter are preparing to break lances with Mrs. Stillman in Canada.

Cornelius J. Sullivan, close friend and chief counsel for Stillman, it became known today, made a flying visit to Canada last week. He registered at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on January 8, conferred with N. K. Laflamme, the banker's Canadian counsel, and then headed up the St. Maurice River. Sullivan's movements since have been veiled in obscurity.

A Stillman agent, an old acquaintance who has operated out of the office of Sullivan since the Stillman scandal first "broke" publicly, asserted here that Stillman is at present in New York. He admitted that he intended to confer with Mattie La Flame, turn over to him the 2,000 pages of printed testimony thus far taken in the case at the Poughkeepsie and Bar Association hearings and line up the Stillman forces for the most heated sort of scrap when the Montreal commission begins to function.

Best information here is that these hearings will begin about the middle of February.

The Stillman forces are unquestionably worried over the successful and spectacular trip just completed by Mrs. Stillman. They realize, should Mrs. Stillman controvert the hidden and keyhole witnesses, her vindication on every point is considered certain.

STORES CLOSED BY FIRE IN NEWTON HIGHLANDS

Lincoln Hall and several stores beneath it in the two-story frame building at Lincoln and Walnut streets, Newton Highlands, were slightly damaged by a two-alarm fire, which started in an ante-room of the hall today. The two alarms were turned in because of the blaze, not the seriousness of the blaze. Most of the damage in the hall property was in the anteroom. Downstairs, the dental office of Dr. Bruce Wolff, the shoe shop of G. E. Cotsy, the fruit store of Nick Scinicariello and the laundry of Sing Foong were damaged by smoke and water. There are seven stores in the building. Most of them closed temporarily. The total damage was $1,000.

$800 FIRE AT NIGHT LIGHT CANDLE PLANT

COURT UPHOLDS LEWIS IN MINERS' UNION ROW

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 14.—John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, was upheld in his action in removing Alexander Howat of Kansas as president of District 14, when Judge Samuel A. Dew of Jackson County Circuit Court today refused to make permanent a temporary restraining order granted Howat and his associates early in December. The order sought would have barred Lewis from interfering in any way in District 14.

$13,000 SEABROOK, N. H., HALL RAZED BY FIRE

Seabrook, N. H., Jan. 14—Governor Caper Hall was destroyed by fire today with a loss of $13,000. The building housed a lodge room of the Junior Order, United American Mechanics, two stores, and a motion picture theatre. The origin of the fire was not known.

The Wonderful Human Body

And Athletics Worth While

Here is, for the time being, the world's champion typewriter and a really useful athlete.

He beat all comers, writing steadily for one hour, 136 WORDS A MINUTE, which means twelve strokes a second.

Look at the second hand as it moves on your watch, or count 1, and realize what it means for the human brain to order and carry out twelve different motions of the fingers IN ONE SECOND. There is intensified mental athletics that makes the hundred-yard dash, the pole vault or the Marathon seem slow, to say nothing of being useless.

As this young man wrote in the contest, he read and copied a story which he had not seen before, called "In God's Country." And do you realize the various operations included in that marvelous performance of twelve strokes per second?

The eye read the word. The nerves of the eye told the brain what word was to be written. The brain told the fingers what the letters were, where they were located on the machine, and the flying fingers, taking the knowledge that first came to the eye or the afferent nerves, and the order they came down the neck, the arms to the finger tips through the efferent nerves, made the twelve strokes successfully.

He kept his mind entirely on that for one hour. That wonderful dynamo, that stored energy, the eye seeing, the brain immediately transforming the printed word in the letters, the nerves and the muscles in the fingers carrying out the brain's orders. It is difficult to conceive anything more remarkable. Young Mr. Hossfeld may well include in his daily prayer: "I will praise the Lord, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made." It takes intelligence to do good typewriting; it takes extraordinary adaptability, co-ordination of nerves and muscles, steadiness and will power to do what this young man did.

He deserves praise, as does every man who does A USEFUL THING AS WELL AS IT CAN POSSIBLY BE DONE.

EQUAL, almost, to "The Wonderful Human Body" is the Underwood Typewriter, used by Mr. Hossfeld and all previous World's Champion Typists for 16 consecutive years. It is so scientifically designed, so skilfully manufactured, that it responds with unerring accuracy even at the marvelous speed of 12 strokes per second.

PELLETIER CASE NAMES 4 MORE TO DATE

Gallagher, Innes, Carroll and Patron All Accused Since Filing of Original Charge

Four new alleged co-conspirators not mentioned in Attorney-General Allen's bill of information have been named by the prosecution in open court since the trial of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier on charges of official misconduct began on December 27, before the full Supreme Court. They are:

1—Daniel J. Gallagher, formerly assistant district attorney under Pelletier, and later United States district attorney for the district of Massachusetts, accused of complicity in alleged conspiracy by Pelletier, Daniel H. Coakley and William J. Corcoran to extort $50,000 from Mrs. Jeanie S. Chase and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Wilson Emery of Brookline.

2—Charles H. Innes, former State Senator, member of the National Republican Committee, and one of the most influential Republicans in the State, charged with suppressing criminal action against Attorney George T. Perry and other members of an alleged auto theft ring; stopping secret indictments in Essex County; having boasted that he could help Corcoran obtain a receivership in Suffolk County, and to have received a share of the $10,000 paid to Corcoran.

3—Attorney Francis M. Carroll, former fire commissioner of Boston, and long a leading member of the Suffolk bar, charged with conspiracy in connection with the Emerson Motors case and with having received $5,000 as his share of $20,500 alleged to have been extorted from the company by Pelletier and Coakley, Coakley being charged with receiving $15,500, and Pelletier, $4,000.

4—Jack Patron, alias Snow, a private detective, who is accused of having figured in the Emery case conspiracy by his alleged selling out to Coakley while in the employ of Curtis Wilson Emery and his mother-in-law, and who made daily reports to Coakley.

EMERY FIRED GALLAGHER.

Attorney Daniel V. McIsaac against whom the Emery-Chase association has filed a petition for disbarment as in the cases of Coakley and Corcoran, was named in the deposition of Benjamin Piscopo, former proprietor of the Colonial hotel on Massachusetts avenue. Piscopo deposed that McIsaac demanded $35,000 of him, and that he finally compromised for $21,000 in order to escape threatened prosecution and alleged "copping on his hotel," and that McIsaac said that he would settle for much less if Joe and Webber were not in it, too.

The name of Thomas L. Walsh, Boston attorney and brother of United States Senator Walsh, figured in the testimony offered yesterday in the Emery-Chase case. Curtis Wilson Emery testified that he retained Walsh as counsel, and that Walsh was present at a conference between Daniel J. Gallagher and Mrs. Jennie S. Chase in their home in Brookline when Gallagher acted for Chase.

Emery testified that he interrupted the conference and ordered Gallagher out of the house. He told Gallagher that he (Emery) and his family would "rot in jail" before they paid a cent. He said he retained Gallagher the first time Gallagher came to his office and told him he was threatened with criminal prosecution.

ABANDON BOSTON-BOUND SHIP; CREW RESCUED

The captain and crew of the schooner James W. Hall have been rescued at sea, 400 miles from Boston, after abandoning their waterlogged craft, according to a wireless message received at Charlestown Navy Yard.

The message was relayed to Boston from the station at Otter Cliff, Me. Steamer West Canon took the ship wrecked men on board, but the message did not state where she was bound.

The Hall was bound to Boston from Charleston, S. C. She is still afloat and a menace to navigation.

Paris, France.

ONE of the most noteworthy gowns in a season when so many gowns are distinctive, uses lama tissue in orchid for its corsage and to make a charming petal drapery for the skirt. Shoulder straps and great plaques, joined one to another, of pearl and jet, make the bodice a sumptuous thing indeed, and the skirt beneath its drapery is of orchid chiffon brocaded in silver.

MAISON ORANGE builds a gown on the lines the discriminating Parisienne is most pleased to wear this season, the full, wide-sleeved blouse, low-placed girdle and full skirt, mediumly long. The fullness of the bodice is gathered at each side into an embroidered shoulder motif, and the skirt, too, confines its fullness to the sides, the gathers beginning below an embroidered plaque posed at the side of the girdle. Crepe marocain is in tissue used, in periwinkle blue, and the same shade of mousseline de soie makes the sleeves, which have their deep cuffs outlined with embroidery. The embroidery is in silver and gold, with just a trace of blue.

PORTLAND CLUB AND HOTEL INDICTED

Portland, Me., Jan. 14—The Cumberland Club, the leading social club in the city, and the Congress Square Hotel, for years one of the prominent hostelries of Maine, figure in several indictments brought by the Grand Jury in Somerset County, charging violation of the liquor laws.

The evidence against the hotel was collected after the death of Philip H. Lord, a patron of the place and well known in the city. Lord died in a suburban health resort and an autopsy showed him to have been the victim of pocket peddlers.

The hotel has been owned by the Rines brothers, and managed by Henry P. Rines. The indictment does not charge the management with violating the law, but alleges that liquor has been bought, sold, stored and consumed in the hotel.

The indictments naming the Cumberland Club are said to have grown out of allegations made by a former bellboy at the place, who claimed he had been arrested by the steward when he accidentally broke a bottle of whiskey. Two raids on the club followed, in which quantities of liquor were seized and arrests made.

HIGHEST PRICE FOR MEATS IN BOSTON

Boston says the highest retail prices for beef, lamb and pork, but it is the citizens' own fault, for they demand and get a superior quality of meat, declares William C. Davis of the Bureau of Market Reports, United States Department of Agriculture.

Davis is in Boston conducting an investigation which is part of a nation-wide inquiry. He expects to be in Massachusetts at least a month. His purpose, he says, is to help benefit everybody, consumer, retailer, wholesaler and livestock man.

"Boston is the only section of the country where there has not been a decrease in meat retail prices," he said. "The department wants to find the reasons for the difference in the price of meat now and in 1914.

"If we find injustice anywhere it will be remedied as far as we are able to do so. The Department of Agriculture is also conducting an investigation in New England, but I do not know its exact nature.

"Government reports from large cities show that Boston meat prices are from two to six cents a pound higher than anywhere else in the country. Some dealers are making 15 per cent. gross profit on lamb, but often the overhead cuts this to 2 per cent. net."

BRIDES ANSWERS ATTACK ON VETERANS' BUREAU

Dr. Arthur E. Brides, district manager of the government Veteran's Bureau here, has issued a statement replying to the charges, said to have been made by Congressman Frothingham in Washington, that the local bureau is paying an extravagant rent for its offices in the Washington-Essex Building.

These offices, Dr. Brides says, were secured only after exhaustive efforts to find cheaper quarters which would be centrally located. Because of the large number of claimants who must be given attention, he points out, a central location is necessary. He added that plans which are now under consideration by the local bureau will save the government from $1,000,000 to $2,500,000 a year.

SOUTHERN CLUB TO HONOR MEMORY OF LEE

General Robert E. Lee's birthday, January 21, will be observed by the Southern Club of Boston with a banquet and ball at the Copley-Plaza. Reverend Channing H. Cox and Mrs. Cox will be guests of honor. Other special guests will be Admiral and Mrs. H. A. Wiley, Captain Charles H. Scott of New York and Alabama, Frederick J. McLeod and Mrs. Frances B. Sayre. Major Robert E. Green, President of the Southern Club, will head the receiving line. Governor Cox will speak on "The North and South Today." Captain Scott will discuss Lee as a military genius, and Admiral Wiley will talk on "The U. S. Navy of Civil War Days and Today." During the dinner there will be Southern melodies by Handley's Southern singers.

TRAMPLE FLAG ON ARRIVAL OF WALES IN INDIA

Prince, However, Was Not Personally Molested in Riotous Demonstration

By Associated Press.

London, Jan. 14—Dispatches to today's newspapers from their correspondents in India agree that the Prince of Wales was in nowise menaced personally at the time of the disturbance in connection with his arrival at Madras.

Doubt is even expressed that he saw anything of the disturbance, although the trouble occurred in the Triplicane quarter, adjoining the government house, to which the Prince rode along a three mile route, watched by crowds described as friendly, and even enthusiastic.

It was after the Prince's arrival at the government house, however, that what seems to have been the worst part of the outbreak happened, took from the Triplicane, which is mainly the Mohammedan quarter, rushed the statue of Lord Ripon, a former viceroy, and an ornamental pagoda decorated with British flags, portraits of the Prince and palms. All the decorations were seized, scattered and trampled in the dirt. The greatest disorder prevailed.

Although the authorities made elaborate preparations beforehand in the instant area, which was patrolled by troops and armored cars, it seems there was only a single policeman at the Ripon statue. He called for help, and infantry with a machine gun was rushed to the scene. No firing was reported, although the soldiers were pelted with stones. The Prince, apparently, was within the government house exchanging greetings with native chiefs when the rioting occurred.

SUSPECTED LIQUOR SCHOONER SEIZED

The schooner Star, abondoned by her crew on the night of December 30 when she lost up at Commercial Wharf, was seized by custom officials who suspected that she was used in connection with the activities of the British rum-runner Golden West. This schooner, it is believed, was used to convey the contraband liquor which the Golden West is known to have landed from the boat to the shore along isolated spots in Massachusetts Bay.

SPEAKERS TO DISCUSS ANGLO-IRISH TREATY

John J. Splaine of New Haven, Ct., and Alderman James J. Harold of Waltham will be the principal speakers at a meeting Sunday night in the Hibernian Building, Roxbury, under the auspices of the Robert Emmet Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom. Splaine will discuss "The Effect of the Anglo-Irish Treaty on American Foreign Relations," and Harold will deal with the treaty from the Irish National aspect.

"SHANGHAI" ALLEGED I. W. W. SYMPATHIZER

Shreveport, La., Jan. 14—Harold Muiks said to be an attorney for the American Civil Liberties League of New York, was taken from a local hotel lobby by an unmasked man, placed in an automobile and carried out of town. He was here in connection with the case of three men recently arrested and sentenced to the Parish Farm for vagrancy. All three were said to be I. W. W. members.

DEALERS GREET JEWETT WITH ENTHUSIASM

New Light Six-Cylinder Car of Paige-Detroit Company Is Unveiled in New York

The Jewett, the new light six cylinder car designed and built under the auspices of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, and to be sold by Paige dealers, was unveiled by President Harry M. Jewett at the annual New York dinner in Hotel Commodore Thursday evening in the presence of about 800 dealers and distributors.

It was the first glimpse anyone, other than a factory official, has had of this keenly anticipated addition to 1922 automotive offerings, as the car is not on public exhibition as yet. For the next few weeks only dealers will be given this opportunity.

The unveiling of the Jewett, came as a dramatic climax to the stirring address Mr. Jewett made to the Paige guests.

ENTHUSIASTIC GREETING.

It was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm. The soundness of its design, the sturdiness of its construction and the various mechanical features as outlined informally by Mr. Jewett, made a profound impression on the Paige men.

As Mr. Jewett pointed out in his address, the addition of the Jewett places the Paige dealer in an enviable position, for with the New Series 646 and 644, Paige models, he has now a complete line—one that gives him a strong position in each commanding price and quality field.

SOME SPECIFICATIONS.

Here are a few of the specifications, construction details being tentative and subject to minor changes in production:

Motor—Six Cylinder, en block; Bore, 3¼ inches; stroke, 5 inches; Seaverite cylinder heads; L-head; cast-iron oil pan.

Crankshaft—Drop forged steel, heat treated and ground; three long main bearings 2¼ inches diameter.

Lubrication—Plunger pump forces oil under pressure to main bearings, camshaft connecting rods, crankpins and rear frame cross member.

Cooling—Gear driven water circulation by centrifugal pump.

Transmission—Conventional, three forward speeds and reverse; special transmission lock, lubricated with oiler controlled by Yale oil indicator.

Axles—Timken built.

Springs—Semi-elliptic, spring stock. Front, semi elliptic 34 inches long by 2 inches wide; rear, semi-elliptic, 54 inches long by 2 inches wide.

Fuel Supply—Vacuum feed from 17 gallon tank at rear, operated by rear frame cross member.

Wheels—One hundred and twelve inches tread 56 inches.

FIGURES SHOW SOME CUT IN COST OF LIVING

Washington, Jan. 14—The cost of living decreased between June, 1920, and December, 1921, 22.7 per cent. at Detroit, 19.7 per cent at Chicago, 19 per cent. at Washington, 18.7 per cent. at New York and 13.4 per cent. at Philadelphia, the Bureau of Labor statistics of the Department of Labor announced today. From September to December last year the decreases in these cities were given as 2 per cent. at Detroit, 1.3 per cent. at Washington, 1.07 per cent. at Chicago, 1 per cent. at Philadelphia and nine-tenths of 1 per cent. at New York.

NEW CHEVROLET MODEL

The new superior Chevrolet model "Four-Ninety" four-door sedan coach; on exhibition at the local salesrooms.

MORE VALUE IS SEEN AS SHOW FEATURE

"After one has seen the ninety-two different makes of automobiles exhibited at the New York Automobile Show," says W. C. Sills, president of the Sills-Chevrolet Company, New England distributors for Chevrolet Motor Cars, "it is easy to answer the question—what is the outstanding feature of the 1922 automobile?

"That answer is, 'More real value!'

"There is an unmistakable tendency toward real quality in those substantial elements that make the genuine transportation economy, comfort and satisfaction. There is less of so-called 'sham luxuries' and fewer frills but more vital refinements in design, materials and assembly.

"No line of cars shows more vital improvements and refinements than the new line of superior Chevrolet open and closed cars. Of all the popular Chevrolet models none has aroused more intense interest than the new Chevrolet 'Four-Ninety' four-door sedan coach, which is destined to be one of the most popular closed cars in America.

"Briefly, it has roomy five-passenger body, wide doors with adjustable windows, swaying to level of door panel tops. Automatic window regulators, same as used on most expensive cars. Solid front seat, deep upholstery. Velour upholstery, French plaited—an attractive, striped pattern of long-wearing material. Straight side cord tires, size 30x3½ front and rear, non-skid, transmission recommended tire size. Split type demountable rims.

"Improved interior design, mahogany garnish rails around window and door panels. Improved door locks, double latches on all doors inside; three doors lock from inside and right front door is equipped with a Yale type lock."

ASK MR. FIX IT

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a 1920 Ford car and I notice that when I go slow the front wheels wobble, almost shaking the steering wheel out of my hands, but when I speed up to 15 miles an hour I do not notice it at all. I have fastened cars on stands in the road, and cannot find any play in the spindle bushings. Could this be caused by the wheels being towed out too much?

A. F. A., S. Boston, Mass.

There are two things which may cause this wobbling you speak of. One is a looseness in your whole front system which may require new dowel pins in your tie rods, etc., and the other is it may be necessary to straighten up your front axle, as it may be bumped back too far. Use one of the top nuts of the front side studs to be sure of an inch never than the front.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Here a 1921 Ford. I put new inside on and adjusted them, but the chatters on all 3 bands. Also have to clean carburetor every day to keep it working. Oil dots on brushes.

Watertown, Mass.

Get a special transmission oil which is used for Ford cars, at most any Ford dealer. Take your carburetor apart and clean it, and put about two drops of oil to every 900 miles. It would seem that you have been using too much oil.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a 1914 Ford and it is low on low and reverse gear. The spring bolster and the springs seem to be even.

C. G. A., Medford, Mass.

There is a leather pad where the spring fits on there's and they may have slipped. Loosen the U-bolts and line up this leather pad so that the spring sets squarely on the frame.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Will you kindly explain the manner in which piston rings are fitted. I have a 6, 7 cyl. Ford car and the rings have not in them before but have been there for a year. I did not know how.

C. T., Arlington, Mass.

You can between the piston rings should be .003 of an inch which is about the thickness of a thin sheet of writing paper. Every piston should not be more than .006 play in the piston. If they are worn more than this you will have to have oversize pistons fitted or you may be able to get by with oversize rings. One of the other things that is necessary is to see that the rings have a sound seat. Will both of these orifices.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—I have a late 1918 Commonwealth Partin-Palmer. Could you tell me if these people are still in business, and their present address? If not, where could I get motor racket and rear end parts for the car? Motor No. H. R. Bracking, Mass.

Believe the company is no longer in business. Write to those where you can obtain parts under date from the Partian Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.

AUTO WORLD IS SURPRISED BY DODGE CUTS

Retroactive Reductions Announced During Show Week Will Be Made February 1

Among the numerous events in New York during automobile show week the most talked about by the men of the motor vehicle industry was the eighth annual meeting of Dodge Brothers' dealers held in the ball room of the Pennsylvania Hotel, and was notable for several reasons.

It was made the occasion for the official announcement of a substantial reduction in prices of Dodge Brothers' cars and it was one of the largest gatherings of the kind ever held anywhere.

In announcing the price reduction the Dodge Brothers' officials stated that the reduction applies to all cars sold on January 1 and thereafter. But the amount will not be announced until February 1.

ANNOUNCED BY HAYNES.

The official announcement of the price reduction was made by F. J. Haynes, president of Dodge Brothers, who was introduced by C. W. Mathewson, general sales manager.

Mr. Haynes reviewed the success of Dodge Brothers during the past year, during which this company was in second position as far as production figures are concerned among all the manufacturers in the world.

Since it began, when Dodge Brothers began to build cars, over 850,000 have been manufactured. One great contributing factor to this success has been that the company has never produced but one type of chassis though the chassis has undergone continual refinement and improvement.

SUPPLEMENTED BY FILMS.

Mr. Haynes' talk was supplemented by moving pictures, showing some of the important methods by which the factory has co-operated with dealers, and concluding with a slide carrying the price reduction announcement.

Dealers were present from California, Texas and most of the other States in the Union. There was a large delegation from New England, headed by H. D. Day, district representative. Among them were several executives of the Henshaw Motor Co., the Boston dealer.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Attention, Ford Owners!

Ford parts, like most everything else worth while, are counterfeited. The manufacturers of these imitation parts are obviously not as interested as we are in maintaining the high standard of quality and the complete satisfaction of Ford owners. Imitation parts are manufactured to sell at the highest possible rate of profit and the grades of steel used are consequently not the same high quality, specially heat-treated alloy steels specified in Ford formulas for the manufacture of GENUINE FORD PARTS.

Don't be misled—Insist upon GENUINE FORD PARTS made by the Ford Motor Company. By so doing you will get from 35 to 100 per cent more wear from them, and you will pay the lowest possible cost—the same everywhere.

WOULD PUNISH STOCK BUYING BY SOLONS

Bill of Senator McLane One of Many Filed for Action by Legislature

Anybody want to change anything in the State? Now is the time to do it. The time for filing bills with the Legislature expires at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Among the hundreds that found their way into the hopper in the early morning rush were these:

By Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River—To punish by fine and imprisonment any member of the Legislature who buys stock in any corporation which is going to be benefited by pending legislation. McLane was one of the legislators whose purchases of El and Bay State Street Railway stock were exposed by the Griswold probe committee.

By Everett W. Burdett—To allow the gas and electric corporations to capitalize their premiums by issuing $20,000,000 of stock to their shareholders without the payment of another nickel by the present stockowners.

HITS HOTEL EMPLOYES.

By C. W. Corbett—For physical examination of the employes of hotels and restaurants.

By Representative John M. Woods of Somerville—To repeal the law that authorizes the State to establish a minimum wage for women and minors.

By S. A. Gilbert Cox—That the secretary of the State Board of Medicine be a lawyer, not a doctor.

By John F. Daly of Cambridge—To facilitate the purchase of gas and electric companies by the cities and towns.

By Representative Stephen R. Mealey—To allow prizefight promoters to manage fighters.

By the manufacturers and wholesale jewelers—To regulate the night auction sales of jewelry.

AID FOR CLOSED BANKS.

By Judge Louis Swiz—That closed banks may petition the Supreme Court for the right to reopen to liquidate; that interested parties shall have the right to inspect the books and papers of closed banks; that the bank commissioner shall be required to get the permission of the Supreme Court before taking possession of a bank.

By Charles H. Whittle—To establish Penikese Island, the old leper colony, as a reservation for wild birds.

By Frank P. Bennett of Saugus—For an investigation of the advisability for compulsory religious education in the public schools.

WOULD PUNISH LANDLORDS.

By C. J. Brady—To punish landlords who refuse to let tenements to occupants with large families.

By James O'Brien—To make it unlawful for employes to strike in an occupation that is licensed.

By Miss Edna Lawrence Spencer—For maternity benefits, including cash payments to needy, expectant mothers.

$5,000 LOSS IN EARLY MORNING DOWNTOWN FIRE

Fire swept through a three-story brick building at No. 99 Essex street early today, destroying fixtures, machines and supplies and causing damage of $5,000.

The flames were discovered by a watchman on the top floor, occupied by the Peerless Underwear Company. Before he had been given notice by control the other floors, occupied by the Ideal Cap Company and the Essex Restaurant, had been slightly damaged.

Smoke from the fire went in a neighboring building, also a three-story brick structure, at No. 88 Essex street, causing a small loss.

HUNT FOR MISSING WESLEYAN STUDENT

Middletown, Ct., Jan. 14.—Efforts are being made to trace the whereabouts of Elmer George Gruhal, a member of the Class of 1925, Wesleyan University, who left his home in Rochester, Vt., Jan. 5, expecting to come back to college after stopping in New York to visit a medical specialist, and who has not been heard from since Jan. 7, when he sent a telegram here, stating that he was detained in New York.

EX-MAINE OFFICIAL SECRETLY INDICTED

Portland, Me., Jan. 14.—Dr. William H. Lynch, local veterinary surgeon, was charged with embezzlement of 52,424 of State funds in his office while serving as State livestock sanitary commissioner, in secret indictment reported by the Superior Court grand jury.

Screen Star Severing Marital Tie With Actor Husband

ALICE BRADY.

Is granted interlocutory decree of divorce from James Crane. She will apply for final decree in three months.

New York, Jan. 14.—Alice Brady, stage and screen star, daughter of William A. Brady, producer, has obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from James L. Crane, the actor. The decree was granted by Justice Wilmer in Supreme court, according to Samuel Falk, referee. It holds for three months, at the end of which time Miss Brady will apply for a final decree.

In her complaint Miss Brady accused her husband of over friendliness with women here and in Paris. She added that he was given to drinking too much liquor. Testimony was heard behind closed doors.

$105 A PLATE CURLEY DINNER EXAGGERATED

Mayor-Elect Refuses Sanction to Such Event; Tickets $10, Says Manager

Reports which were being circulated in Boston yesterday to the effect that a banquet would be given Mayor-elect James M. Curley, with tickets selling at $105 a plate, the proceeds to go to the Mayor, appear today to be considerably exaggerated.

In the first place, the Mayor-elect has come out flat-footed with the declaration that he would not stand for such a thing. If a banquet with plates selling at a reasonable price is being arranged for him, he said, he would gladly attend. But he insisted that he would not even consider it if the alleged plan to give an affair which would net him in the neighborhood of $100,000 is carried out.

In the second place, George Phelan, who is managing the affair, said that there was not the slightest possibility that tickets would sell for over $10 each. The misunderstanding arose, he said, when a number of business men were asked to buy blocks of ten seats apiece, each to pay $100 for the ten places.

The dinner is to be held as a testimonial to Mr. Curley, he said.

COLONEL McINTYRE AT NEWTON CENTRE CHURCH

Colonel McIntyre, head of the Salvation Army, will speak in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, tomorrow night at 7:15, on the work and methods of the Salvation Army in Boston, much of which the public knows nothing about. The purpose of the service is entirely devotional and educational. The Salvation Army band will lead in the singing. At the morning services at 10:45 Mrs. Alice Hubbard, violinist, will play Gounod's "Ave Maria" and Handel's "Largo."

IRISH FUND HELD IN TRUST FOR REPUBLIC

Want U. S. Friends to Lead in Move to Relieve Free State Need

By HAYDEN TALBOT.
(Universal Service Special Correspondent.)

Special Cable Dispatch.

Dublin, Jan. 14.—"Theoretically, it is true that we have won, but from any practical standpoint, victory might better have been defeat."

This statement was made to me at an early hour this morning after the breaking up of the private meeting at the Mansion House of Griffith and Collins with other members of the Dail and most of the new ministry. It was made by one of the ablest members of the ratification party.

I had noted, without attaching especial importance to it, that a dozen or so of the fifteen weary-eyed men left the Mansion House afoot ignoring the waiting night hacks.

Afoot they made their way through deserted streets to their several hotels. Griffith and Collins had more than a mile to walk to the Hotel Gresham. But my informant was silent. Identify I am not at liberty to disclose, explained the significance of this proceeding.

ALL UNDER HIGH STRAIN.

"As of course you know," he said, "all of these men have been under terrific strain for five years. The members of the delegation whose rejection the treaty have hardly slept for the past five months, and now a brand new complication has arisen.

"During the sessions of the Dail and at all times since the truce De Valera, Griffith, Collins and other leaders had automobiles at their disposal day and night, provided from the funds of the republic.

"De Valera, surrendering two rows of houses in Dublin and several farms and in receipt of a salary as chancellor of University College, has sufficient income to enable him to live well. He can still maintain a car if he wishes to. But none of the others has any financial resources worth mentioning.

"Few persons realize the penniless condition of these men who for years have been the rich or in prison.

"Thus the full significance will come to you of De Valera's astute move in the Dail. De Valera knew that Collins would keep a promise publicly made, no matter what it cost him personally. He knew by so simple manoeuvre he effectively divided the guns of the treaty supporters, for they now face without funds to run their government.

PENNILESS GOVERNMENT.

I then recalled that the night before the treaty was signed De Valera had obtained from Collins a public promise as Minister of Finance to put all the funds raised by the republic in trust, and to make no use of them for the Free State. I had not realized it before.

In a talk with De Valera he had been at pains to point out to me, in answer to a question, what would become of the money raised for the republic by the sale of bonds in America.

He reminded me on that occasion that the new government was pledged not to touch these funds, but to hold them in trust for the republic and for nothing else.

As a matter of fact, Collins declared in the session of the Dail, that he would see that every soldier everywhere would be repaid in full.

"Now here is the question," my informant continued, "for the American friends of Ireland to prove in a practical way whether they truly approve the treaty.

"It is not a case of asking America for more than they have already given. It is merely a case of letting them know the disposition of the provisional government for money. If the American subscribers to the Irish Republic are willing to give support to the Free State as they have given it to the republic, the difficulty of converting the bonds of the republic into Free State bonds could surely be accomplished without undue difficulty.

"The question is, is there a leader of American public opinion sufficiently interested in the cause of Ireland to give his support to this scheme?"

FUND FOR FREE STATE.

"If it is going to be done at all it must be done immediately, for without the financial support of the Dail, that has already been promised, the new government is in many other ways, the business of establishing the new Free State is going to be next to impossible.

"It is not a case of asking America for more than they have already given. It is merely a case of letting them know the disposition of the provisional government for money. If the American subscribers to the Irish Republic are willing to give support to the Free State as they have given it to the republic, the difficulty of converting the bonds of the republic into Free State bonds could surely be accomplished without undue difficulty.

"The question is, is there a leader of American public opinion sufficiently interested in the cause of Ireland to give his support to this scheme?"

ENDICOTT NAMED HARVARD BURSAR

Arthur L. Endicott, '94, has been appointed bursar of Harvard University to succeed Charles P. Mason, '82, who retired from active duty on December 1. Mr. Endicott will begin work next Monday as bursar, although his formal appointment as bursar will date from June 13 next, when Mr. Mason's resignation takes effect. Mr. Endicott was for fifteen years with C. F. Hovey & Co., and for the past ten years has been treasurer of a manufacturing company of cotton textiles.

John L. Taylor, who has been connected with the financial administration of the university for thirty-six years, and has held since 1910 the title of assistant comptroller, has been promoted to the new position of auditor.

CHELSEA MAN DIES OF RUNAWAY INJURIES

TYRONE POWER BIG PERSONAL SUCCESS IN 'WANDERING JEW'

If the "Wandering Jew" did nothing else but bring back in a big part Tyrone Power, it has served an admirable purpose. It is a joy for one who remembers the days of fine acting to watch and listen to a man like Power. The modern actor can read a few lines of dialogue effectively and he can make gestures which serve the purpose of his brief remarks. If you notice a modern play you will discover that it is expressed almost entirely by short crisp speeches, making no demands upon the elocutionary powers of anybody in the cast. Ability to read a few lines at a time in a natural manner, a pleasant personality and a gift for wearing clothes are the sum total of the requirements of the average "type" actor.

Tyrone Power survives from a better school. These old-fashioned actors may seem a trifle grandiloquent to us today, but they know how to play audiences. They are gifted orators, with voices like great musical instruments, capable of running the whole gamut of human emotions. They know how to move the hand and the body in a manner to intensify their speech and to illuminate it. It may be that people don't talk like Tyrone Power any more. If so, it's too bad.

Heggie Says You Don't Have to Feel a Role

There being so comparatively few drunkards to be reformed nowadays, the prohibition folks are turning their attention to the stage, and O. P. Heggie, the intoxicated butler in "Happy-Go-Lucky," has been the recipient of several tracts.

"These people think I am playing myself, apparently," declared Mr. Heggie with considerable heat. "They assume I feel like the disreputable Mr. Stillmettle on and off the stage. Not even on the boards. I feel like Peter Heggie playing Samuel Stillbottle. During the performance I merely watch the performance of Mr. Stillbottle grow under my hands, as the sculptor might watch the faun grow out of the marble without merging into the faun except through the intellect, working objectively. I have no sympathy with the actor who says he has to feel his role, because I have no sympathy with the crudities which result from that method of work."

Ann Davis Says You Do Have to Feel a Role

We now introduce Miss Ann Davis and the fight is on.

"I must feel what I express," declares the leading woman of William Hodge's classic "Dog Love" at the Hyperion. "When they talk to me about expressing feelings entirely through an exercise of intellect, I do not understand them. For myself I must feel what I express. And to express emotions I must have those emotions. The actor whose work carries conviction must have cried enough to have laughed enough, suffered enough, and exulted enough to mould these qualities together and give them reality on the stage.

In the case of O. P. Heggie, Miss Davis would have to add "drunk enough" in addition to those other experiences, if she carried her theory to its logical conclusion. And how lucky for her with her views that it is Heggie and not she who is wanted for Al Woods.

In fairness to Miss Davis and Mr. Heggie neither know the other are contradicting each other. I have merely taken the deadly parallel from interviews submitted by the press agents of each.

McIntyre & Heath Lament the Good Old Days

James McIntyre and Thomas Heath, who are appearing at the Wilbur Theatre in "Hot Pepper," are worrying, thank you, but they are worrying about the future. Not for themselves—for others. They fear that the real, genuine, dyed-in-the-wool black face dialect comedian soon will be a thing of the past. There are only a dozen or so of him left. McIntyre and Heath are two of the limited number. When these men have passed away it will be at an end. Why? Because nobody is training them. Nobody is down South studying the negro to preserve his identity on the stage. Within a few years burnt-cork minstrelsy will be but a burlesque of its real self.

McIntyre and Heath are right, despite the fact that Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Lew Holtz and Frank Tinney work in burnt cork. These modern blackface comedians do not make the slightest effort to create negro characterizations, or to use true negro dialect. They black up to be funny, and they succeed, and that's all they want.

Dolly Once Painted Pictures Now Paints Her Face

A superabundance of pep and ginger was responsible for the abandonment of an artist's career for a dancer's career by Miss Dolly Morrissey of Abe Reynold's Revue at the Gayety Theatre this week.

After graduating from high school Miss Morrissey took up the study of art in Chicago at her parents' behest. But the hours of monotony in art school, learning to draw lines and study the human anatomy bored little Miss Morrissey with the result that she was often a truant from school, pursuing terpsichorean delights at Chicago dancing academies.

In a moment of desperation at her dislike of the study of art Miss Dolly Morrissey packed her bag and fled to New York, refraining to write to her folks until she had secured a place in the chorus of a Broadway musical comedy. Then a letter was dispatched to Papa and Mama, in which the young lady explained that drawing and painting were too slow and dancing in a chorus was far more preferable.

But so filled with pep and ambition was Miss Dolly Morrissey that she did not remain in the chorus ranks long, but soon was promoted to a place as a principal member of the company. Her fame as a sprightly comedienne traveled swiftly and this year Abe Reynolds strengthened his company by the acquisition of the fascinating little ex-art student.

Fred Stone to Co-Star With Young Daughter

Fred Stone has made the announcement that he will co-star with his sixteen-year-old daughter, Dorothy, in his next production. Miss Stone will make her professional debut at the commencement of next season, when her father's new show has its first performance in the Globe Theatre, New York.

The comedian's librettists, Anne Caldwell and R. H. Burnside, are now engaged on the book for Mr. Stone's next show, and Miss Dorothy will have a prominent part alongside of her father. The young woman is said to possess much of the versatility and vigorousness of her father, besides having a voice and personality that assures her a position among the foremost prima donnas of the American stage.

From the time she was knee-high to a grasshopper, Miss Stone has been training to succeed to the position of her father in the hearts of the American playgoers. She does many of the stunts with which the comedian-gymnast has delighted his audiences for the last quarter of a century, and she has the best instructors in this country to teach her the other "business" of the stage.

French Girl Whose Irish Brogue Is Remarkable

The delightful Irish brogue of Miss Inez de Verdier, prima donna of Dave Marion's own company at Waldron's Casino, is the cause of much comment by those who have met the fascinating little burlesque player.

Miss de Verdier's name is what causes folks to comment after hearing the lilting brogue of the girl. The name is unmistakably French, and people wonder from whence comes the Irish accent in her speech.

Miss de Verdier explains it as follows:

"My parents were in the government service in Ireland, but I was born in France. Father was assigned to a place in the French consular office in Dublin, so to Dublin we moved, and my girlhood was spent in that Irish city. My education was obtained in Irish schools and in an Irish convent. My playmates and chums were Irish, so what more natural than that I should acquire an Irish brogue. Although I am French I have spent but a month in that country, going to the parents' home for a visit before coming to America to embark on my stage career."

GAYETY THEATRE

Abe Reynolds, the hero of many successful seasons in burlesque, will appear all week at the Gayety Theatre in a show he has written and named in his honor, "The Abe Reynolds Revue."

Max Spiegel, well-known producer of burlesque shows, who was the creator of "Sporting Widows" and "Merry Rounders," has this season built a show which is in every respect worthy to bear the name of the man who has been so prominently identified with the two above named successes.

Totten Smith, A. Douglas Leavitt, Ben Holmes give the production every touch which could exert an appeal on the burlesque fans. The former three have written a book which is virile with amusing situations, bright comedy, hits and fines sparkling with humor. And Ben Bergman has written some music which is catchy and guaranteed to hold the ear of any fan. Ed Hurdy, who, by the way, is known as the Urban of America, has rushed some magnificent scenery which is up to the artistic standard for which Spiegel's shows have been famous.

WALDRON'S CASINO

With a production of unusual magnificence, with dazzling scenic effects, marvelous costumes, filling of well-fit musical numbers, and a book replete with scintillating comedy situations, Dave Marion's Own Company comes to Waldron's Casino this week. The company presents a fantastic burlesque revue entitled "The Land of Nowhere."

In seasons past Dave Marion's Own Company has been a favorite organization in the burlesque world and this season the show presented by the company excels all previous productions.

Foremost in the cast is Emil ("Jazz") Casper, a blackface comedian of more than ordinary ability who works on the style of Bert Williams and who has proven to be a sensation this season. Will H. Ward, an eccentric comedian of unusual ability, who was for many years among the stellar lights in musical comedy and burlesque, makes an admirable foil to the uncouth humor of Mr. Casper.

GLOBE THEATRE

The Globe Theatre will offer an extraordinary bill of diversified feature photoplays for the coming week, with a continuous policy, beginning at 10:30 in the morning and concluding at 10:30 at night. The program will offer three spectacular productions which include Paramount's super special "The Miracle Man" adapted from the popular stage success of the same name and directed by George Loane Tucker. In addition to this compelling photoplay, Douglas Fairbanks will appear in one of his remarkable films "Up in the Clouds." The third attraction of the list will unfold the incomparable film comedian in what is considered to be his finest photoplay "A Dog's Life."

"BACK PAY"

"Back Pay" is the next play to come to the Selwyn Theatre, opening there Monday night, January 23. It comes direct from New York with the original company starring Helen MacKellar, who will be remembered here through her performances in "The Storm" and "Buddies." "Back Pay" is another A. H. Woods' production and was written by Fannie Hurst, a writer of such original ideas, who may be depended upon to give an interesting play.

MISS O'HARE PROMINENT IN IRENE

Once in a hundred times the sweet ingenue has jumped into the spotlight over the heads of the chorus.

One of these remarkable jumps was made two years ago by Ursula O'Hare, the golden-haired, good-looking Rexburyi singer appearing as the young society girl in "Irene," at the Shubert Theatre.

You can't miss her, for two reasons. She's so pretty, in the first place. And she has two of the tuneful song numbers scattered through this popular musical comedy, "Hobbies" and "Castle of Dreams."

Miss O'Hare admits she has been lucky—very lucky, indeed. She had hardly finished her studies at the New England Conservatory before Charles Dillingham engaged her for a small part in the second "Hitchy Koo." Those lucky debuts happen once in a while, but not often. But she had just the points required—youth, pretty features, also a pretty voice and a graceful way of dancing.

Another lucky feature of her debut was that it took place in her native city. Being the daughter of John J. O'Hare, who is well known in Boston newspaper circles, and having herself won many friends in school theatricals, her first appearances were made under most advantageous conditions. But she went ahead strictly on her merits. In New York she appeared in "Apple Blossoms" and then she returned to Boston to appear with Fred Stone in "Jack o' Lantern." All last season she was with Stone in "Tip Top" in New York. When that engagement ended suddenly, the star having broken a bone in his foot, this talented Boston girl joined one of the Western "Irene" companies.

She was called back from the West to take her present prominent role in the special "Irene" company organized for the return engagement at the Shubert. And this, too, was a bit of luck for her, she says, for, much as she likes the "road," she is always glad to come home.

PLAYS that REMAIN in TOWN:

"THE WANDERING JEW" at the Hollis is a remarkable fantastic drama based on the well-known legend. Tyrone Power in the title role scores a great personal hit.

WILLIAM HODGE in "Dog Love" has a vehicle for his unique personality which is more amusing than anything in which he has appeared for several years. Plymouth.

FRED STONE in "Tip Top" is performing his miracle of selling out all the time in a bad season at the Colonial Theatre.

"HAPPY GO LUCKY," Al Woods' venture in the artistic, begins its last week at the Selwyn. O. P. Heggie is excruciatingly funny in the role of the intoxicated butler.

McINTYRE and HEATH in "Red Pepper" have the best show of its type which they have produced for some years. It's doing a big business at the Wilbur.

"IRENE" with its grotesque shop girls and its male dress maker is making as many people laugh as ever at the Shubert. For once it seems they can come back.

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM" at the Tremont is Griffith's biggest and best. It's one attraction that nobody will think of missing.

LEON'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

Headed by Charlie Chaplin, the peer of the comedians in the eyes of millions of screen fans, the management has arranged an unusually attractive bill for the coming week. Chaplin will appear in his laugh-provoking comedy, "A Dog's Life," which is acclaimed by many to be the most humorous production of this inimitable comedian's notable career. The vaudeville is of stirpily proportion, and will include such splendid performers as Cody and King, "The Crisis," Four Brown Girls, Sosman and Sloane, Miller Klint and Cuty and others. The feature photo-play will unfold a story of gripingly human appeal in which the popular and well-liked Gladys Walton essays the principal feminine role. The production is entitled, "Playing with Fire." As usual, a new program will be presented on Thursday. The headline photo-play will be the initial Boston screenings of "Received Payment" featuring Corinne Griffith.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

The vaudeville program at Gordon's Olympia Theatre for this week teems with interest, both in vaudeville and photoplays. The generous vaudeville program is headed by "The Four Musketeers," presenting Peggy Parker and other vaudeville favorites. Among the other good acts is Henry Melody's Sextette, an elaborate musical offering.

Featuring the photoplay program is Harold Lloyd in his screamingly funny new comedy, "Never Weaken," and Katherine MacDonald in the absorbing screen romance, "The Beautiful Liar."

BOGANNY'S ALL SERVED IN ARMY

Outside of its mirth-provoking quality Joe Boganny and his comedians, especially imported for Shubert vaudeville, and appearing at the Majestic the coming week, hold a peculiar record.

There are ten men in this company, headed by Boganny himself, and the company has been held intact for fourteen years, during which time they have played in every part of the globe where there was a theatre large enough to merit the expense of engaging such a large act. There was just one break during the fourteen years—during the war the company was disbanded as all except the three midgets, became members of the British forces. All of the soldier comedians were wounded at one time or another, one of them was captured and spent twelve months in a German prison camp, but as soon as the armistice was signed and they were able to get their release from service, the ten men again became the Boganny Troupe. As Joe Bogany says, they came back in pretty good shape, after considering that one would think would incapacitate them for further work in the acrobatic field, which is the basis for their success in vaudeville.

They were appearing at the New York Hippodrome in 1915 when Joe Boganny got a call for his services in the British army. Boganny lost no time in answering and took the entire troupe back to England, of which country the entire troupe are natives. When the tanks got into service, the three midgets—all of the troupe who were left in private life—tried to get into the Tank Corps but they were rejected, although they still hold the view that they were peculiarly fit for work inside the baby tanks

MARK TWAIN'S YANKEE ON FILM

Mark Twain's masterpiece, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," has been made into a motion picture by William Fox on a scale worthy of the subject. Issued as a special production, it will open an engagement at the Tremont Tuesday evening, and continuing twice daily thereafter at 2.15 and 8.15 p. m. "A Connecticut Yankee" is a purely American classic. It has been translated faithfully to the screen, and all the rollicking humor of the book is heightened by the visual appeal. Mark Twain was not a humorist alone, in each of his books, even the funniest he pleaded a cause. In "A Connecticut Yankee" he argues for the modern way of doing things, and proves that we are lucky to be living today and not in the days of old when knights were bold. Martin Cavendish, the Yankee, young, shrewd, up-to-date, finds himself suddenly back in the middle ages among King Arthur's Knights of the Round Table, his adventures there are made to play a part in Martin's own modern love romance. There is hardly a moment without a laugh. Thanks to Emmett J. Flynn, the director, the settings are superb—notably the scene in the tournament, wherein Martin, dressed as a cowboy and armed with revolver and lariat, routs all of King Arthur's knights. A remarkable cast of notable screen favorites was enlisted for the portrayal of the principal parts. The important role of Martin Cavendish, the Yankee is superbly interpreted by Harry Myers, while Paulina Starke appears as Sandy and Rosemary Theby plays Queen Morgan le May.

KING ARTHUR WITH NEW FIXINGS

Yankee Brought Up-to-Date Would Astonish Mark Twain, Were He Alive

If Mark Twain were alive now he would love the idea of a "Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court" being done on the films, and yes, he would be amazed at some of the improvements, alterations and additions that have been made in filming the story.

It is more than a generation since this famous book was written, and at that time Twain's Yankee was a very brisk, crisp person. The directors found the dialogue in the book when it came to adapting it for motherhood was a bit old fashioned. Slang phases of the nineties do not sound very snappy nowadays. Accordingly they decided that captions which brought the Yankee up to date would please the present day public best.

The result is that the Yankee during the film uses expressions which Mark Twain never heard, the very latest Broadway quips. Whether Twain would approve of this nobody knows. But one thing is certain, he would jump with joy to find a Ford car has been introduced into King Arthur's court in this version of his book. As automobiles had not been invented when Twain wrote the book he did not make use of them. Instead he used the bicycle. The bicycle figures in the film of course. It is by means of the bike that the Knights of the Round Table in full armor move from place to place.

Merlin's miracles, the vampish sister of King Arthur—oh, there are lots of improvements in the 1921 Yankee at King Arthur's court.

Monte Blue, Indian Actor, Plays Danton

A motion picture actor who has struggled hard and patiently to achieve success is Monte Blue, seen in the compelling role of "Danton" in D. W. Griffith's latest and greatest work, "Orphans of the Storm," now at the Tremont Theatre. Blue is different from most screen actors in that he is independently wealthy and does not need to labor for money.

He is a Cherokee Indian and his people have become comparatively wealthy through oil land leases in Oklahoma. Blue has with good judgment bided his time, waiting for a role at fancy figures and counts his bank accounts in large figures. His home is at Ochmulgee, Okla., where it stands in the centre of a thriving town the site of a council house of the tribe. Blue comes from a strain of chiefs.

Monte Blue first began picture work as cowboy with Mr. Griffith and then was selected as one of the leading riders in the Ku Klux Klan scenes of "The Birth of a Nation." He has earnestly begged of Griffith a part ever since. His chance came when the producer set about with his work of bringing forth "Orphans of the Storm." He needed a handsome figure for Danton and a man who could ride. Blue filled these requirements. What is more he studied the history and absorbed all the authentic works concerning the great popular leader of the French Revolution.

Those who see that mad ride of rescuing Orphans at the climax of the great Griffith work, the dash through the gates, the tall figure of Danton, bending low out of the saddle with reprieve in hand, and the wonderful reining up of his steed at the foot of the guillotine will know that Monte Blue is from a wild gallop to such a stop that the animal rears back on both hind legs. They will know that such riding was only learned on the open plains of America.

They Said It With Brickbats, not Flowers

They said it with brickbats instead of flowers when a company from the William Fox studio went down into New York's Chinatown to film scenes for "Thunderclap," the big special feature which opens at Park Theatre next Monday.

It was the Chinese New Year, and the company had no thought of this. Whether the Orientals objected to working on a holiday, or to the film their festivities for a white man's photoplay is not known, but the players on the streets and in riot followed which the police reserves were called out to quell.

The first scene was attempted before a Japanese actor was bodily beaten, two of the white actors received a severe beating and several Celestial heads were tapped by the sticks of the police.

The trouble started when Richard Stanton, director of the picture, arrived at the studio in Chinatown, accompanied by Violet Merseeaur, J. Barney Sherry, John Daly Murphy, made up as Chinese, and other members of the company, which included several Japanese.

This Was a Motion Picture Motor Bus

Sometimes innocent bystanders create no little amusement for motion picture players. During the making of scenes for "Received Payment," which will be the headline photoplay at Loew's Orpheum Theatre the coming half of this week, a Fifth avenue bus was used and passed up and down the avenue where it was filmed by concealed cameras. During a wait at Forty-Second street an elderly woman entered the bus and sat down. She waited about ten minutes and then on noticing any sign of activity approached Corrine Griffith, the star. "Can you tell me when this bus is going, young lady?" she asked. "Not for some time yet," Miss Griffith replied. "You see, this is a private bus." "Are all the buses out of Fifth avenue private?" inquired the woman. "Not that I know of," said Miss Griffith. "There are several passing now that you might board." "They all look alike to me, but this is the third one that I have attempted to enter, and each time I am told it is a private bus. Why don't they distinguish the private buses from the public ones so that anyone who is in a hurry can get somewhere?" Miss Griffith tried to explain to the woman that the bus she was in was being used for a scene in a motion picture. "Horrors!" exclaimed the woman. "You don't mean to tell me that at my time of life I am being filmed in one of those awful photoplays! Let me out!"

Second Extra Concert by Symphony.

Next Monday evening, January 16, at 8:15, in Symphony Hall, will take place the second concert of the extra series of five by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which have so successfully been started this season. Pierre Monteux, the illustrious conductor of the orchestra, has made a program for this concert of notable beauty and interest. The Fifth Symphony of Beethoven in C minor, which among all symphonies is of the most widespread and enduring favor, will open the concert.

The soloist of the occasion will be Estelle Liebling, the talented young soprano, the beauty of whose voice is attracting considerable attention in the several cities where she has appeared. The number which she is to sing with the orchestra are the aria from Mozart's "Figaro," "Non so piu," and an aria from Saint-Saens' "Etienne Marcel."

Symphony Program.

The music of Karl Szymanowski will be introduced to Boston when Pierre Monteux conducts the Second Symphony of this celebrated Polish composer at the next regular pair of Boston Symphony concerts to be given in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. This will be the first performance in America of this score, although it has been played and highly admired in Europe. The composer is now living in New York.

"Le Couvent sur l'eau," (The Convent on the Water) by Alfredo Casella, the highly talented young Italian composer now in this country, which was performed with such high success at these concerts earlier in the season, is to be repeated. The other numbers are the symphonic interlude from Cesar Franck's choral work, "The Redemption," and Weber's overture to the opera "Oberon."

Second Concert by Heifetz.

Jascha Heifetz, the pre-eminent Russian violinist, who, giving a concert last Sunday in Symphony Hall after a season's absence from this country, will return to Boston to appear in a second concert of his own in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, February 5, at 2:30.

Sophie Braslau.

Sophie Braslau, the brilliant young contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who is fast taking a pre-eminent place among the contralto singers of our day, will appear in Symphony Hall in a concert of her own on Sunday afternoon, January 29, at 3:30.

THUNDERCLAP AT PARK THEATRE

Unusual Film Play of Sporting Life Dealing With the "Sport of Kings."

An unusual photoplay spectacle will be one of the two first-run offerings to be shown at the Park Theatre next week when the William Fox production, "Thunderclap," will be unrolled. This is the photoplay which recently closed a long run at the Central Theatre in New York, where it was received with loud acclaim. It is a play of sporting life, dealing with the "sport of Kings," its story treating of the evils that follow devotion to this profession of chance. The story concerns the ruin wrought in the lives of a paralytic mother, her convent-bred daughter and her son, all brought to travail by the gambling propensities of the stepfather of the boy and girl. He runs a fashionable gaming house, and thither the girl is brought to act as hostess to the frequenters of the establishment. The boy has inherited from an employer a race-horse, Thunderclap, and this horse he rides in a race to victory in order to prevent his sweetheart's marriage to the gambler's friend. Around this central incident is built a melodrama rife with plentiful incidents created to provide suspense and thrills, the climax of which comes in the horse race. On the same bill will be shown Vivian Martin in a picturing of an Edward Childs Carpenter story under the title, "Pardon My French."

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ.

Gloria Swanson's second Paramount star picture, "Under the Lash," should prove an engaging dramatic production, which will be shown at Gordon's Central Square Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is a drama of human emotions and a most unusual story is presented by a group of interesting character portrayals.

RETURN OF EVELYN SCOTNEY

Clever Opera Singer to Appear in Boston Concert on Sunday, February 12

The news that Evelyn Scotney at last feels able to return to Boston and give a concert will be joyful news to thousands of Bostonians who admired this clever opera singer who can sing Scotch and Irish folk songs as no other woman singer can. The devotion between Evelyn Scotney and her husband, Howard White, was so apparent to all who knew them, and since his sudden death three seasons ago of this "Mr." Miss Scotney has not felt she could control her emotions if she returned to the scene of so many successful joint concerts with Mr. White, and she has remained at the Metropolitan Opera in New York for two years past, where she has been acclaimed one of the greatest coloratura sopranos of all time.

She will give several concerts en route Boston before coming to Symphony Hall, February 12. Tomorrow night she sings at the City Theatre, Brockton, and February 5 she will sing at the Academy of Music, Haverhill.

Samson and Delilah.

"Samson and Delilah," the Biblical drama of the French composer who died a month ago, Camille Saint-Saens, will be given a performance in oratorio from the Handel and Haydn Society, Emil Mollenhauer, conductor, on Sunday afternoon, January 23, at 3:30. The part of Delilah will be sung by Margaret Matzenauer and the part of Samson by Morgan Kingston, both former stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Emilio DeGogorza, the famous baritone, will sing the impressive role of the High Priest of Israel, and Herbert Wellington Smith, the noted bass, the part of Abimelech.

TID BITS ON BOSTON STAGE AND PICTORIAL NEWS OF THE DAY

TERESA VALEIRO is one of the principal eye soothers with Fred Stone in "Tip Top" at the Colonial Theatre. Teresa seems to be doing a little Spanish stuff. The rest of the show's good, too.

"RED PEPPER!" From this curious title one would be led to believe that "Red Pepper," with McIntyre and Heath, at the Wilbur, was hot stuff. It is. And here are a few of the reasons. This show has some of the prettiest cuties in town.

HOT DOG! William Hodge, now disporting his "Dog Love" at the Plymouth, is no longer an American actor. He is an American institution. Year after year he brings his quiet philosophy to Boston in some play of his own manufacture. His visits come as regularly as Spring—and he's just as welcome.

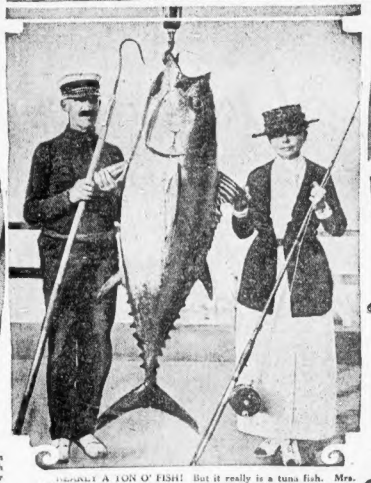
ALAS, Poor Cupid, We Knew Him Well! The divorce ring, decorated with a broken cupid's bow, is the latest for divorcees. There's room for jewels on it—one for each divorce. Ring is to protect youth against grass widows. (Fotogram.)

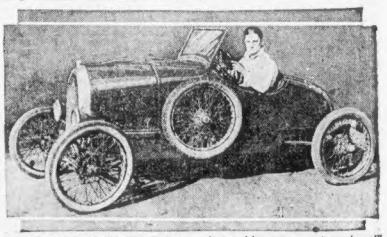


[illegible] A TON O' FISH! But it really is a tuna fish. Mrs. Keith Spalding of Chicago is the woman who landed it—after 2 hours and 41 minutes. Weighed 165 pounds. Largest caught off Catalina Island, Cal., during 1921. The man did nothing but help her haul it aboard. (Keystone.)

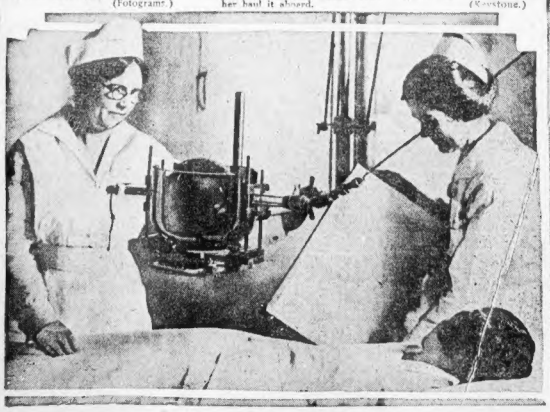
LOOK WHO'S HERE! Dolly Morrissey, always popular with the burlesque hounds, is back again, this time with Abe Reynold's Revue, which opens Monday at the Gayety. Dolly's as good as the show itself.

[illegible] SPEED FEATS WITH HIS FEET! Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, N. Y., again looms up as one of the favorites for the national championships at Newburgh, N. Y. He has already annexed the N. Y. State championship for 220, 240 and half mile. (Keystone.)

TWO DAYS LEFT! Although no Pretty Motorist pictures will be received after Sunday night, the best of those already sent in will be published. Here is Miss Annette F. McFarland, 79 Glenville Ave., Allston, today's winner. A check for $5 will be mailed to her.



A SPEEDY BUG! This little auto, designed for a movie actor, who will use it in a transcontinental race, can do 80 miles an hour. It is equipped with all the features of a big racing car. Eddie Hefferman, noted racer, was severely hurt putting it in shape. (International.)



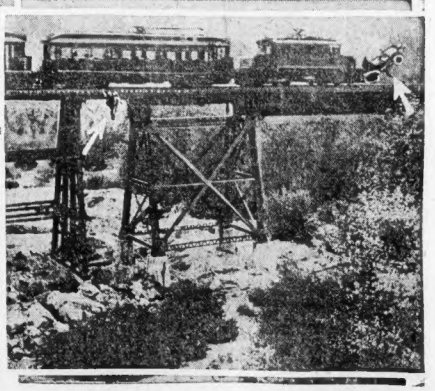
GROPING INTO THE BEYOND! Medical scientists for years have experimented to determine the sex of a child before its birth, but most authorities agree that all suggestions thus far have been pure guesswork. Now comes the X-ray to bring the problem nearer to a scientific solution. The Jewish Hospital at Cincinnati is one of the pioneers in the use of X-ray to determine sex before birth. Just 70 per cent. of the tests have been correct. Special X-ray apparatus, such as is shown above, is necessary to protect patient. (International.)

H. H. RUFUS of Danville, Ill., 44, who walked from his home to Washington with 4 sealed messages for President Harding, has now returned with 4 greetings to his own city. Left Danville on Nov. 18. (Keystone.)

[illegible] MY NIBLICK, PLEASE! Elephants have been put to many uses, but it remained with a Miami golfer to use one as a caddy. This little jumbo is lots speedier than many caddies and he never answers back. (Wide World.)

MRS. ROXA S. KIRBY, country school teacher, was elected assessor of Campbell County, Wyoming, by hard-boiled taxpayers by an overwhelming majority. She knows the business thoroughly.

MISS VIRGINIA M. MURRAY of the Travelers' Aid Society, loaned by N. Y. to Detroit to organize women's police force, says Detroit is most flirtatious city in country. (Fotograms.)



A SMASHING SCENE! A moving picture hero's life isn't all pink mash notes and cooing girls, and, although many of them grate on a regular "he man," there's lot of brave chaps under the grease paint. Here is a scene wherein a young couple in a $3,000 automobile try to cross a railroad bridge and are met by an electric train. They save their lives by hanging from railroad structure.

WALES' VISIT TO UNITE PRINCES OF INDIA

Designed to Draw Them More Closely to British Throne, Viceroy Admits

(Following is the eighth of a series of articles on the rise of the Nationalist movement in India, written exclusively for Universal Service):

By SAILENDRA N. GHOSE.
Director American Commission to Promote Self-Government in India.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Now that the Prince of Wales has toured more than half of India, it seems pertinent to a clear understanding of the Indian situation to point out the underlying reasons for that journey.

Just a few days before the Prince sailed, Lord Curzon said the situation in India was so serious that it would be impolitic to discuss the visit at that time. Earl Reading, Viceroy of India, was not so secretive. In an address ten days before the Prince arrived in Bombay he revealed the real object of the Prince's coming. In an appeal to the native princes to support the British rule, the Viceroy said:

READING TELLS PURPOSE.

"We are meeting in the knowledge that the Prince's visit to India is to be fulfilled and that he will set foot on Indian soil for the first time less than a fortnight hence. I will merely say that I am convinced that the effect of his visit to India will be to bind the princes of India more closely to the throne.

"A large portion of his royal highness' time will be spent on visits to some of the principal States, and as he moves about the country other princes and chiefs, whose States it has not been found possible to include in the tour, will have an opportunity of making acquaintance with their future ruler."

Ordinarily the visit of the Prince to India would be of little interest to the people of the United States. When, however, this country is asked to underwrite, through the four-power treaty, an imperialistic system that holds in subjugation more than one-third of the human race, then every move on the checker-board of international politics becomes of moment.

HOODWINKING AMERICA.

Here on the one hand we have the British-appointed viceroy appealing to the native princes of India to welcome their "future ruler" for the preservation of imperialism in that vast country, and on the other hand, the most skillful diplomatic representatives of Britain gathered in Washington hoodwinking the American government into an agreement to preserve British imperialism throughout the Orient, and so throughout the world.

When he made that appeal to the princes, Earl Reading, although not long in India, realized the precarious position of Britain in that vast country.

That his plan has been a failure is evidenced by the press reports of the unanimity with which the people of India have boycotted the reception given in honor of the Prince of Wales. Vast sums of money—all of which is taxed against the people—have been spent on receptions, durbars, tiger hunts, polo and racing, but in every city the Prince's only welcome has been from the European residents and such Indians as were in government employ.

MIAH MURRAY'S FUNERAL ATTENDED BY HUNDREDS

Jeremiah J. (Miah) Murray, for many years Boston's best known sporting man, was laid at rest in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline, today, following funeral services at St. William's Church, Dorchester. The ceremony at the home was private, but the requiem mass at St. William's Church was attended by hundreds of friends of the deceased. The celebrant of the mass was Rev. Timothy J. Mahoney, pastor, assisted by Rev. Edward O'Brien as deacon and Rev. F. V. Murphy as sub-deacon.

COLLEGE SALARIES INCREASE 50 PER CENT.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—The salaries of presidents and faculty members in State colleges and universities have increased 50 per cent. since 1913, John J. Tigert, commissioner of the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, asserted today in an address before the eighth annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges. The salaries of faculty members rose more rapidly than did the salaries of presidents in the State institutions, he said.

MILITARY DANCE WILL MARK WHITING BALL

A military dance by the Misses Alice Flanagan and Ida Kane will feature the annual grand ball which the John L. Whiting-J. J. Adams Company Mutual Benefit Association will give in Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics Building, next Friday night. A concert will precede the dance, and after the special features of the entertainment have been finished several hours of dancing will follow.

PROBE APARTMENT FIRE IN BROOKLINE

Investigation of a fire that drove six families from their beds at 5:30 a. m. 671 Washington street, Brookline, today, has been started by the Brookline police. The damage was less than $500. The fire was discovered by Arthur Langebe of No. 669, who was wakened by smoke and turned in an alarm. Moving his wife and children to safety he roused the other tenants.

$100,000 RAISED FOR WELLESLEY CHURCH

The sum of $100,000 has been subscribed toward the fund of $150,000 which the Village Church of Wellesley, Rev. Stanley Ross Fisher, pastor, is seeking for the erection of a new church edifice on the Village square. It is hoped to break ground on Washington's Birthday.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Boston Fancy to Mark Skating Carnival for Radcliffe

Miss Ella Snelling of Commonwealth avenue, who, with a crowd of other Boston society folk, will do some fancy skating in the large ice carnival to be held Tuesday evening at the Arena in aid of the Radcliffe College Endowment Fund.

(Photo © Clamolais Studios.)
MISS ELLA SNELLING

By BETTY ALDEN.

THAT portion of society which is planning to attend the skating carnival next Tuesday evening in aid of the Radcliffe endowment fund, is without a doubt looking forward especially to The Boston Fancy, which will be skated by a sextet of couples whose prowess on the ice is well known to their friends among the smart set. The twelve skaters will be paired off as follows: Miss Ella DeT. Snelling and Courtney Crocker, Miss Martha T. Brown and Charles M. Rotch, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Howland (Eleanor Crocker), M ss Edith Rotch and Francis Munroe, Miss Ruth Yerxa and Sherwin C. Badger, and Miss Edith Sigourney and Arthur Goodridge.

Practically all of these skaters mentioned above are well known to ice enthusiasts as well as to followers of other sports. For those who follow the ins and outs of tennis stars, Edith Sigourney, the daughter of Mrs. Henry Sigourney of Beacon street, needs no introduction. They remember how this society girl made a very good showing when playing with Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, she defeated Miss Mary Browne and Mrs. Louisa Williams of California in the Middle Atlantic States doubles championship, which was staged last Fall at the Philadelphia Cricket Club. Mrs. Mallory and Miss Sigourney showed excellent team work in this match, as they had been paired off in many double matches in England just a few months before.

Miss Sigourney, by the way, was among the group of society girls who, during the war, took up wireless operating. Miss Sigourney, in fact, passed her examination and was accepted as radio operator by the Navy Department. She was also a member of the active corps of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness made up of girls taking different courses in first aid.

Ella Snelling, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rolman Paul Snelling of Commonwealth avenue, has achieved no little distinction as an amateur dancer, and no Vincent Club show is complete without a number or two by this very attractive girl. M ss Snelling, who spent last Summer travelling abroad, took part in a carnival held last March at the Arena, when she appeared in a number with pretty Elizabeth Caswell of Boston and Prides Crossing.

Both Miss Caswell and Miss Snelling are members of the 1919-20 Sewing Circle, which includes some of the cleverest and most attractive girls who have made their bow to society in recent years. Of this 1919-20 Sewing Circle group is Miss Rosamond Adie, who has done such splendid work in France, helping in the reconstruction work of the devastated area; Mrs. Reed Pierce Anthony (Mary Hartwell), a November bride, who "made" the fan drill, one of the most attractive features of last year's Vincent Club show; Miss Elizabeth Cabot, who is wintering in France with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Handasyd Cabot, and her sister, Pauline Cabot, of Newbury street; also the Misses Elizabeth Lyman, Elinor Jackson, Mabel Bremer, Eleanor Hunneman, Lena Turnbull, Louisa Weld, Anna Wheatland, Lillian Aldrich and Penelope Curtis.

The high water mark of Washington's social season was attained on Thursday evening, with the first diplomatic reception held at the White House since 1914.

President and Mrs. Harding extended a cordial greeting to the entire Diplomatic Corps, numbering nearly 500, as well as the distinguished group of guests invited to meet them. Court dress or military uniform was in order, and the gold lace and buttons of the men, rivaling the rich silks, velvets and jewels of the women, presented quite a brilliant sight.

There were several innovations in procedure. For instance instead of having all the ladies of the Cabinet in the receiving line, as has been the custom, the President and Mrs. Harding were assisted only by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes.

The Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge, and the Cabinet members and their wives, were received by the chief executive and Mrs. Harding in their private apartments and made a descent of the great stairway, following their hosts. Once in the Blue Room they broke up into informal groups, greeting the notables who assembled there, after they had made their way down the receiving line.

Colonel Clarence O. Sherrill made the presentations to the President and Mrs. Harding and Secretary and Mrs. Hughes, who took their stand at the door which opens from the Blue Room into the Red Room, facing the apartment. The diplomats, headed by the dean of the corps, the French ambassador, were the first to be presented. They assembled in the State dining room and the line formed so that it passed through the Red Room and finally to the great East Room, the guests lingering there until their departure.

Mrs. Harding wore a beautiful gown of white panne velvet, embroidered in silver and jet. It had a graceful train and transparent sleeves, which reached to the top of her long white gloves.

Betty Alden.

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and County

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Proctor of Boston, who are for the Winter at Camden, S. C., have as their guest Mrs. Proctor's aunt, Mrs. John L. Bennett, of Charleston, S. C.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw is in New York on a visit, where she is stopping at the Hotel Belmont.

Mrs. Hollis H. Hunnewell of Wellesley was a member of the luncheon party which her mother, Mrs. Frederic Nelson, gave in the new terrace restaurant of the Hotel Plaza, New York. The other guests included Mrs. Henry W. Taft, Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mrs. John J. Wysong, Mrs. John A. Logan, Mrs. Gouvenor Kortwright and Mrs. Oscar Richard.

The Rev. Dr. William G. Thayer, headmaster of St. Mark's School in Southboro, will be the assisting rector at the wedding of Miss Leila Howard Burden, daughter of the late Joseph Warren Barden and Mrs. Barden, and Lindley H. P. Chapin, which is to take place next Thursday in Grace Church, New York city. The nuptial event will be one of the season's most important affairs of its kind, as both the bride and groom come from two of the oldest and most exclusive Knickerbocker families.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Forbes of Boston have arrived at Orlando, Fla., one of the most popular Winter resorts of that State.

WILSON HOUR TO BE OBSERVED MONDAY

Ceremony at Old State House Will Mark Opening of Campaign for Foundation

With guests of honor including Jessie Wilson Sayre, youngest daughter of former President Woodrow Wilson, Mayor and Mrs. Andrew J. Peters, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes, chairman of the women's committee, and John F. Moors, State chairman, the Massachusetts Committee of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation will observe the "Wilson Hour" at the Old State House, Washington and State streets, on Monday from 12 to 1 o'clock.

The ceremony will mark the opening of the nation-wide campaign for $1,000,000 "in recognition of the national and international services of Woodrow Wilson." Similar ceremonies will be held in every State in the Union, in Alaska, the Canal Zone and Porto Rico.

State headquarters at No. 101 Tremont street announced today that preparations were well advanced to collect the $85,000 which has been assigned to this State. More than sixty local committees have been formed, those in Boston, New Bedford, Worcester, Springfield and Pittsfield being especially strong.

Among the members of the State committee, all of whom have been invited to attend the "Wilson Hour" ceremonies on Monday are: Dr. C. H. Abbot, Judge George W. Anderson, Mrs. George P. Parker, Edmund Billings, Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch, Dr. John Graham Brooks, Dr. Richard C. Cabot, Dr. Samuel M. Crothers, Miss Frances G. Curtis, Professor Garrett Droppers, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Dunbar, President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot, Miss Eugenia B. Frothingham, Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, President Harry A. Garfield, Dr. and Mrs. Wilfred T. Grenfell, Solomon B. Griffin, Professor Charles H. Haskins, Mrs. Augustus Hemenway, Mark A. DeWolf Howe, Jr., Rev. Edwin H. Hughes, Mrs. Charles Peabody, Professor Ellen Perry, Mayor Edward W. Quinn, Rev. E. Talmadge Root, Professor F. W. Taussig and Francis B. Woodman.

COLEMAN SPEAKER AT WELLESLEY DINNER

The annual meeting and dinner of the Society to Eliminate Economic Causes of War is to be held this evening at the Wellesley Inn, Wellesley. Isaac Sprague is president of the society and Roger W. Babson secretary. George W. Coleman, president of the Babson Institute, is to be the principal speaker.

Joseph Boudreau Dead

Attleboro, Jan. 14.—Joseph Boudreau, former Fall River merchant, died suddenly at the home of his son, No. 754 Park street, in his sixty-second year. He was born in Canada, and came here to live a year ago.

ETHICAL SOCIETY WILL HEAR SETTLEMENT HEAD

Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott of New York will address the Boston Ethical society tomorrow at 11 a. m. at No. 3 Joy street, just west of the State House, on the subject, "Youth and the World's Greatest Need." For twenty-six years Dr. Elliott has been an associate leader of the New York Ethical Society, a teacher of ethics in its day school of 750 pupils, and head worker of its West Side neighborhood house, the Hudson Guild. He is well known throughout the country as the president of the National Federation of Settlements. From his long and varied experiences he appreciates the needs of children.

COL. SCHERER TO STAY IN FIRST CORPS AREA

Colonel Louis C. Scherer, in charge of militia affairs in the First Corps Area, will remain in his present command. The attempt to have him assigned to the General Staff College, Washington, has failed.

Major-General C. R. Edwards, commanding the First Corps Area, has come to the defence of Colonel Scherer and praised his work in this corps area. He has also received the unanimous endorsement of the National Guards of New England, comprising officers of the 26th and 43d Divisions.

BABSON WINS THANKS OF WELLESLEY COASTERS

Roger W. Babson has made a consting place for the children of Wellesley on one of the hilly slopes of his large estate, where they can enjoy their Winter sport without danger. Several children have been seriously injured in Wellesley during the past two weeks while coasting on the public streets.

MEN'S CLOTHING TO REFLECT BALLROOM

Designers Tell What Will Be Styles as Result of National Questionnaires

By Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 14.—Men's clothing during the coming year will be, for the most part, sober in its general effects, but it will reflect something of the atmosphere of the ball room.

The National Association of Retail Clothiers and the International Association of Clothing Designers, in session here, have digested a great deal of data relative to men's garments, having collected information through questionnaires received from all over the country.

This year's styles will be based on the views of customers thus expressed. A statement on the modes to be followed during the Spring and Summer of 1922, declared:

"The sport garment has become the recognized necessity for golf and motoring, owing to the present era being distinctly toward outdoor life, necessitating clothes in conformity with such trend. The tendency of colorings will be light gray and tan in club checks, herringbone and tweeds, which lend themselves particularly to this type of garment.

"Trousers will be designed along straight lines, with larger knees and wider bottoms. The spirit of the times shows a trend toward the adoption by men of all ages of styles typical of and accepted by the younger generation.

"There is a growing tendency in plain models toward a trifle looser bodies, a trifle wider shoulder, with narrower lapels and gorges on higher lines."

WELLESLEY TOWN MEETING IS PRONOUNCED LEGAL

Wellesley has been somewhat stirred recently by the report that the January town meeting held on New Year's Day might be invalid because of the fact that January 1 was a legal holiday, but the town authorities announce that the legal authorities have been consulted and that they pronounce the meeting perfectly valid.

Quebec Will Open Wine Shop for Women Only

By Associated Press.

Montreal, Jan. 14.—The Quebec Liquor Commission is planning to open a wine shop for women, managed by members of their own sex, in the heart of the shopping district.

The purpose of the innovation is to make it unnecessary for women desiring to purchase wine to rub shoulders with motley males who now frequent the commission's depots.

Wine will be the only beverage sold.

O'CONNELL FOR DISBARMENT TRIAL CHANGE

Files Bill to Require Cases to Be Heard by Superior Court Judges

A bill which would require all disbarment cases to come up for trial in the Superior Court, instead of in the Supreme Judicial Court, as at present, has been filed in the State Legislature by Attorney Daniel T. O'Connell of No. 53 State street as a means of clearing up the great press of litigation which now clogs the Supreme Court.

O'Connell has also filed a bill which would create a commission of seven to inquire into other ways and means of clearing the crowded docket.

Announcement and explanation of these bills is contained in communications sent by O'Connell to Addison L. Green, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association; Henry P. Eaton, president of the Boston Bar Association, and Roland W. Sherman, president of the Boston University Law School Association.

In these communications, O'Connell points out that a large number of disbarment cases are now pending before the Supreme Court, and that there are intimations of more such cases to be filed shortly. This makes certain, he says, that the time of one or more of the justices will be kept occupied until Fall, at least, in disposing of these matters alone.

He points out that there are at present 139 cases which, though argued before the Supreme Court, have not been decided, and points to the case of the deposition of a certain closed bank, whose case was argued last Fall and who must wait for payment of dividends until Spring, as an example.

O'Connell asserts that the people are entitled to relief, and declares that the ends of justice will be served equally well by having disbarment cases heard before the Superior Court.

WORCESTER MAN TRIES TWICE TO END LIFE

Worcester, Jan. 14.—Peter Sayian, forty years old, of Framingham, is under observation at Worcester State Hospital after having made two attempts to commit suicide at the City Hospital. He tried to escape by jumping out of the window in his pajamas. Hospital attendants found him wandering about in the snow. Several hours after he was brought back he was found hanging from a grated window with a bed sheet tied about his neck.

JAPAN'S STATUS IN FOUR-POWER PACT A PUZZLE

Inclusion of the Empire as an "Insular Dominion" Causes Conjecture

By JOHN D. BARRY.
Written Expressly for the Universal Service.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The other day I wrote an article on the four-power treaty and on the complications that resulted from the lack of verbal clearness. It reported a talk between a group of correspondents and reflected the opinion that the misunderstanding in regard to the treaty had resulted from a blunder.

The framers hadn't intended to include Japan in the reference to "the insular possessions and insular dominions" in the Pacific, but when they discovered that, legally, Japan was included, they decided the legal interpretation didn't make any real difference, and they would let it stand.

I have just received news that contributes to a clearing up of the situation. It comes from someone closely associated with the chief workers in the conference. He asked me to consider his information confidential.

"When the treaty was under discussion," he said, "Senator G. A. Pearce, of Australia, objected to Balfour that the Australians and the New Zealanders would object to being put in a position of inferiority to the people of Japan. The islands belonged to Free States and they could not accept from the Japanese any protection for their territory that they didn't give to the Japanese mainland.

"Balfour talked the situation over with Secretary Hughes and with a Japanese delegate and it was agreed the delegate should cable his government about the matter. The reply said the Japanese government didn't like the idea of having Japan included in that reference as the resolution seemed to make her subordinate to the other powers and also was likely to bring out opposition from the United States Senate; but, in spite of these objections, it would give its consent.

"When the treaty was made public, and, to general surprise, it was found Japan actually was in the reference and criticisms were made, the Japanese government asked that the facts were coming true, and, in the circumstances, the best thing to be done was to amend the treaty so as to take out the Japanese mainland. Senator Lodge knew perfectly well Japan was in that reference. He had taken part in the discussion about its inclusion."

The question now is: Was the apparently far-fetched reason for Balfour's insertion of the reference to the "insular dominions" the one first given? If it wasn't, what then was the reason?

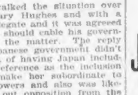
"And Senator Lodge, why, with seeming intent, did he avoid specifically referring to Japan as one being among the romantic islands of the Pacific.

"Didn't he know that the people of this country, not to speak of the people of Japan and of the other civilized countries, would be interested?

"There are still some puzzling circumstances for consideration in this matter. How did it happen that after the calling between Washington and Tokio, Admiral Kato, when the treaty was made public, should have told a Japanese journalist he didn't think Japan was included in the reference to the 'insular dominions'?"

B. U. "SECRETARIES" PLAN DANCE NEXT MONTH

The Swiss Room of the Copley-Plaza has been engaged for a sophomore hop to be held by the girls of the Boston University College of Secretarial Science, next month. This is an annual affair.



To Louise Newcomb of Manchester, N. H., is left the honored responsibility of choosing the chaperones for the dance which will last from eight until two. They will be Dean and Mrs. P. Lawrence Davis, Professor and Mrs. William L. Corbin, Miss Milah Vaughn, Miss Anselmo and Mrs. Amelia R. Damon, house mother of the new clubhouse.

The committee of which she is chairman is as follows: Ruth Middleton, Attleboro, general chairman; Lillian Lehmann, Newton, music and hall; Anne Marshall, Gloucester, tickets and program; Louise Hodgkins, Manchester, N. H., chaperons; Jeanette Ryan, Fitchburg, decorations; Josephine Trodiffet, East Boston, publicity, and Emily Mansfield, Lynnfield, refreshments.

OFFER REJECTED BY PHONE OPERATORS

Boston Telephone Operators' Union has rejected the company's compromise offer to put Miss Katherine Gray of the Roxbury exchange in a clerical position. A union grievance committee will appear before the company officials. Miss Gray was demoted from junior chief operator to operator and her salary cut $10 a week by the company.

H. A. WHITE OF LEICESTER IS DEAD IN FLORIDA

Worcester, Jan. 14.—H. Arthur White, prominent for many years as a manufacturer and head of the H. A. White Manufacturing Company of Leicester, is dead in St. Petersburg, Fla., according to news received here. He was a former selectman, school committee member, former member of the Legislature, treasurer of Leicester Academy and a Civil War veteran.

Reports on the success of the campaign of the Federated Jewish Charities were made at a luncheon at the City Club. Above are a few of the active workers as sketched by Artist Hirmony of the Boston American staff.

JEWISH CHARITY DRIVE PROVING BIG SUCCESS

The Jewish community of Boston is elated over the splendid showing which the committees in charge of the drive of the Federated Jewish Charities of the city for a fund of $400,000 has made.

About $213,000, considerably more than half the sum needed, has been pledged and the campaign which opened and until next Wednesday. The fund will be used to carry on the various Jewish charities in Boston for the current year.

At a luncheon held yesterday at the City Club two committees reported that they had exceeded their quota for the campaign. They were the committees of the Jewish trade and the furriers. The former has secured pledges for $5,351 against a quota of $5,400, and the latter has pledges for $1,333 against a quota of $1,529.

Leon Straus, one of the leaders of the drive, said today: "Louis Kirstein and his associates have a tremendous task to perform. We are asked to raise a sum considerably in advance of last year, in a period of business depression. We are fortunate, however, in having a man of Mr. Kirstein's great ability and energy at our head, however, and we will get the money.

"Among Jews it is not necessary to plead or coerce our victims. We hardly even thank them. In Jewish tradition charity is taken for granted, and it is the recipient and not the giver who confers the obligation."

PARENTS SAVE FOUR CHILDREN FROM FIRE

Four small children narrowly escaped being burned to death and were saved only by the prompt action of their parents when fire destroyed the home of Roger Flaherty in an isolated section of land off Wood street in the southern part of Dedham early after midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Flaherty awakened by the crackling flames, carried out John, aged three, and Edward aged five, wrapping them in blankets as they passed through the smoke-filled halls. Then they returned and rescued six-year-old Grace and Anna, aged five. Anna fainted from the smoke and a doctor was called. Flaherty had to run a mile to turn in an alarm. Damage is estimated at $2,000.

GARLANDS TO REUNITE IN DEDHAM, IS REPORT

Charles Garland, who has occupied the public eye for a week because of his decision to accept the million-dollar legacy which he had previously rejected, is now believed to be about to leave his little farm in North Carver and take up his residence with his wife and daughter in Dedham.

Mrs. Garland is said to have denied that the two ever really separated, in the sense of being estranged from one another, and she is known to have leased a palatial home in Dedham. She is said to have said that she and her husband will move in next week.

SOUTH END MAN DEAD AT THE CITY HOSPITAL

George H. Watson, seventy-six years old, of No. 93 Village street, South End, died today at the City Hospital, where he had been taken when he had a fainting spell while at the Union Lodging House on Washington street. Medical Examiner Leary was notified.

Say Columbus Was Born in Portugal and Was a Jew

Lisbon, Jan. 14 (By the Associated Press).—Christopher Columbus, discoverer of America, was born in Portugal, the Portuguese Academy of Sciences was told yesterday by Patrocinio Ribeiro, a member.

It has been an historically accepted fact that Columbus was born at Genoa, Italy. The statement of Senhor Ribeiro is especially interesting as coming on the heels of an announcement by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Rey Soto, upon his arrival in New York recently, that Columbus was a Jew. The prelate said that this was proved by documents discovered at the home of a descendant of Columbus in Spain. He said Columbus hid the fact that he was a Jew because of the deportation of people of that race from Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella.

BILL FILED TO REMOVE JUDGE KEYES

A petition for the removal of Judge Prescott W. Keyes of Concord, charging him with misfeasance, malfeasance and non-feasance in office, has been filed with the Legislature by Representative Frank J. Burke of Roxbury.

While the details of the charges against Judge Keyes were not contained in the bill, it is understood, based on Burke's run-in with Keyes as brought out in the evidence during the trial of former District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of the Northern District.

One of the charges against Tufts was that he had not pressed a case of alleged larceny against Burke.

It was claimed that Burke stole apples from an orchard in Concord. Burke stoutly denied the charge, asserting that he was ill at home at the time.

Judge Keyes recently tried to apprehend Burke on the same charge again and Burke feels that Keyes is persecuting him in office, has been filed with the Legislature by Representative Frank J. Burke of Roxbury.

CATHOLIC BANK OF PALERMO IS CLOSED

London, Jan. 14.—The Catholic Bank of Palermo suspended today, says a Central News dispatch from Rome.

'JAPAN PROPER' DEFINED BY CONFERENCE

By Universal Service.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Four features of the day's deliberations of the armament conference stand out. They are:

1—Consideration of the five-power naval treaty was completed and agreement reached on all sections which have not been referred back to home governments. A few minor revised draft was put into shape for distribution among the delegation today. A No further meetings on the naval pact are scheduled, however, until answers are received from foreign capitals on the provisions in question.

JAPAN'S BOUNDARIES.

2—Boundaries of the "region of the Pacific" were laid out and "Japan proper" defined for the purposes of a definite formula for application of the agreement to maintain the status of fortifications in the "region of the Pacific."

The Bonin Islands, Formosa and the Pescadores, belonging to Japan, and the Philippines and Guam, American possessions, are embraced within the limits. The Aleutian Islands may not be increased. Australia, New Zealand, British New Guinea, the Japanese homeland are excluded.

This part of the treaty, which is Article 19, is the most important question awaiting acceptance by foreign governments. The Japanese delegation has referred it to Tokio.

3—The article on scrapping was modified to permit conversion of vessels agreed to be scrapped into aircraft carriers. The vessels so converted must, of course, conform to the limitations previously agreed upon for carriers.

This agreement fixes the aggregate tonnage for each of the five powers, restricts the size of individual ships to 27,000 tons, and prohibits guns larger than 8-inch. The explanation was that this change was made strictly for purposes of economy.

It was reported that the American battle cruiser Lexington, now at present, will be one of the vessels made into aircraft carriers by this government.

EFFECT OF BRIAND'S FALL.

4—The conference felt the first effect of the fall of the Briand government when Albert Sarraut, head of the French delegation, declined to attend the meeting of the heads of the United States, British, Japanese and Italian delegation this afternoon to consider the naval pact.

No official explanation of his action was made, but it was learned privately that M. Sarraut deemed it wise not to do anything which might be interpreted as committing his government to any decisions pending instructions from the new cabinet now being formed. This situation may seriously delay the naval treaty, as it is generally accepted that the new French cabinet will not be ready to assume office until the middle of next week.

M. Sarraut has received official orders to continue as head of the delegation.

SACCO-VANZETTI APPEAL MUST BE FILED BY 24TH

Further action on the appeal which attorneys for Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted murderers of a South Braintree paymaster and his guard, are making, was again deferred when Judge Thayer allowed the defence another extension of time for preparing their bill of exceptions to his ruling denying the men a re-trial. The time when this must be filed with him is now set at January 24, after which he will have to pass on the question of whether or not it may be sent to the Supreme Court.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

McCARTHY EASY WINNER OVER PAL REED

Rival Battlers Put Up Great Bout in Feature at C. A. C.

By JACK CONWAY.

Pat McCarthy, fighting below the welterweight limit, easily defeated Pal Reed in a ten-round bout at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building. McCarthy had the edge in every round but the fifth. Honors were even in this chapter.

The remarkable thing about the bout was the fact that McCarthy weighed only 159 1-2 pounds. This is half a pound below the middleweight limit.

McCarthy, who has been fighting heavyweights, agreed to make 160 pounds for this match. It was believed in some quarters that Pat would experience difficulty in making this notch. Consequently there was great surprise shown when he entered the ring below the middleweight limit.

Furthermore, the Roxbury warrior was in superb physical condition and was as strong as the proverbial lion. He did not tire at any point during the conflict.

* * *

McCarthy's showing against Reed and his ability to make 160 pounds makes him a dangerous contender for Johnny Wilson's middleweight title. More than one person who saw the McCarthy-Reed bout expressed the opinion that Pat would be able to conquer Wilson without much trouble.

* * *

McCarthy displayed a new line of fighting. Instead of standing back and permitting his opponent to do all of the work the Roxbury man opened up on every possible occasion and smashed heavy blows to the head and body.

Pat counted with more than twenty right-hand punches to the jaw. Reed is about the only middleweight in the country who could stand up under such heavy punishment.

* * *

Reed, although defeated, put up his usual game battle. He forced the fight whenever possible and scored with some solid blows to the body. In the fourth frame the Natick Sunday School teacher stood toe to toe with McCarthy and engaged in a heavy exchange of wallops.

* * *

McCarthy landed the cleaner blows. His right to the jaw in particular was an effective annoyance. Most of the time he drove the punch overhand. On two or three occasions, however, Pat ripped right-hand jolts to Reed's jaw which scored with stinging effect.

* * *

Barney McAtee defeated Johnny Lucas in the semi-final of eight rounds. Ted Coughlin was over Joe McCarthy in eight sessions, while Young Tansy disposed of Willie Harmon in eight chapters.

* * *

It was announced that Mickey Walker will oppose Ace Sharkey in the next show of the Commercial Club which will be held on Saturday evening, January 28.

* * *

Prior to the starting of the main bout the fans paid silent tribute to the memory of Mike Murray. At the sound of the bell everybody in Mechanics Building stood with bared head. The fans remained standing for a minute. It was a fitting tribute to New England's leader in sporting events for years who has joined that vast army in the Great Beyond.

MADDEN AND TUNNEY WIN NEW YORK BOUTS

New York, Jan. 14.—The historic prize-ring of Madison Square Garden was the scene of an event of moment in the boxing world. Fred Fulton saw fame and money and a match with Jack Dempsey slip away as Bartley Madden fought him on better than even terms through twelve rounds.

Old Pat Levinsky had his torch snuffed out when Gene Tunney took a twelve-round decision over the veteran and with it the light heavyweight championship of America.

The last stand of the old champion was marked by the same skill and cunning that brought him to the very right of the top of his profession. Careful always and with the best decision Levinsky stood off the blows that would have stopped a less wary opponent.

Tunney's margin was clear for all of Levinsky's craft, and 15,000 persons cheered the decision of the judges. Tunney also fought a careful fight, but rushed matters several times when he thought he saw a good opening. He worried Levinsky on occasions, but never was able to bring the veteran into distress.

Ring Results

New York—Jimmy Darcey, Portland, Ore., middleweight, defeated Fay Keiser, Cumberland, Md.

Fall River—Abe Friedman of Boston defeated Johnny Curtin of New York in ten rounds. Young Mack won over Young Barry in a bout for the Fall River lightweight title. Frankie DeLuca of Boston knocked out Jack Dillon of New Bedford in seven rounds.

Augusta, Me.—Kid Dube of Lewiston defeated Johnny Walker of Biddeford, twelve rounds; Kid Clark stopped Young Tinnard in the third.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Joe Lynch of New York scored a technical knockout over Patsy Johnson of Trenton, N. J., in the fifth round.

Youngstown, O.—Danny Frush of Cleveland, featherweight, knocked out Joe Thomas of Rochester, N. Y., in the second round.

Woonsocket—Young Gould of Brockton defeated Walter Butler of Revere in ten rounds. Eddie Parker defeated Babe Peters in eight rounds.

MEDBURY

Says When Some People Invite You to Luncheon, They're So Tight They Serve Split Pea Soup.

Afternoon teas are becoming more popular every day. These are the affairs where they serve everything except tea.

They usually give you coffee so that you can stay awake and talk about the people who didn't come.

The hostess generally prepares the luncheon in a chafing dish in the parlor so you can't knock her while she's out in the kitchen fixing it.

The afternoon is often given over to music. The anvil chorus starts playing as soon as one of the guests goes home.

Everybody knows that they're going to get knocked and most of them are afraid to leave.

Most hostesses won't stand for their guests whispering. She wants them to speak out loud so she won't miss any of it.

Mrs. Wagner says she wouldn't think of attacking Mrs. Brown's character, even if Mrs. Brown has one.

Then Mrs. Smith says that she likes Mrs. Jones, but she's so tight that when she invites you to luncheon she serves split pea soup.

Mrs. Black claims that Mrs. Marks is getting old-fashioned because she's had the same husband now for over a year.

She says she wouldn't think of wrecking the Marks home even if they are buying it on installments.

Then Mrs. Smith says that Mrs. Brown's ocean told her cook that Mrs. Jones' husband, the big produce merchant, was paying his alimony in vegetables.

And according to the iceman, Mr. Brown was short three potatoes and two onions last month.

Mrs. Wagner got up and said she had a good word for Mrs. Jones, but she had to sit down because nobody would listen to her.

When Mrs. Wagner left everybody started gossiping. She wants them to speak out loud so she won't miss any of it.

One of the ladies said: "By the way Mrs. Wagner went after the food, you'd think she came to this luncheon to eat."

There was only one woman at the tea who didn't knock anybody, and when she got up to leave she said: "Ladies, I'm a cat, my hair is false, I make my own clothes, I use powder and paint. I smoke cigarettes, my husband and I don't get along, and I'm a snob. Good bye."

DICK MacFARLAND STARS AS HUNTINGTON WINS

By FRED C. LANE

Huntington School athletes scored two decisive victories when the track team beat Medford, 32 to 27, and the swimming team trimmed over the Malden webfooters, 41 to 9. Both events were hotly contested affairs which brought out a large group of supporters from all three schools.

The Back Bay school can thank Dick MacFarland, the auburn-haired youngster for the story on the track. This former Lynn Classical star surprised the large crowd by winning the 600-yard dash from Captain Joe Kelley of Medford in the remarkably fast time of 1 minute 20 4-5 seconds. Three young athletes met on previous occasions at the same distance and Kelley had a slight edge. Now, if any, looked for a victory over the fast-traveling Medford star.

The first event gave Huntington a fighting chance when the relay race was put on, the score standing even at twenty-seven points each.

* * *

Once again MacFarland showed rare ability running as anchor man when he passed Dowe on the last lap after making up ten yards that his mates had lost, winning the event, and meet, with three feet to spare.

* * *

Not in years has Huntington been so close to defeat on the track as was the case yesterday. Each wearer of the Red and Blue realized the importance of "placing" in all events and gave their best to put the school on top.

Warren Moody of Medford caused a surprise when he beat Bill Spinney in the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 7 inches, one inch better than the Huntington athlete could do.

Bill Luce, who was shut out in the 60-yard dash, came through strong in the shot put and won with a heave of 39 feet 2 inches. Medford won second and third places when Crooker did 38 feet 7 inches and Lindner, dark horse, 35 feet 2 inches.

The 1,600-yard run had the fans up and yelling when Armstrong of Medford, Davidson of Medford and Ralph Parker of Huntington battled for supremacy. Armstrong was out front at the crack of the gun and set a merry pace. Parker burst close to his heels, taking advantage of the pole vaulting. On the third lap Parker took the lead and held it for two laps.

The Medford rooters let up a mighty cheer when Davidson, who had been hanging back, passed Parker, with a lap to go, but Parker had plenty of reserve and won on the home stretch by 15 feet. It was a thrilling race.

* * *

Bill Spinney was an easy winner in the 50-yard dash, winning the final heat in 6 seconds. Moore of Medford was second and Herbert Rountree, another member of last year's Quaker City outfit, put over one. Spinney won his trial heat in the fast time of 5 4-5 seconds. The boys were given a short rest and sent under way in the finals, with the Huntington flyer winning by two feet. Larry Simmons, formerly of Commerce and now of Huntington, was shut out in the final event, although he won his heat in 5 4-5 seconds.

The running of MacFarland in the 600-yard dash gives this eighteen-year-old lad the most ever as a schoolboy in this section. He holds the Boston record for the distance which is sure to stand for some time. In former races, when competing against Kelley of Medford, he usually sat the pace. Contrary to former habits he allowed Kelley to do the leading and hung close to his heels till the final lap when he bent him down to the stretch. Both were pretty well tuckered out after this event and were unable to show to their best in the relay race.

The swimming team had little competition in defeating the Malden webfooters. Huntington won first place in every event except the 100-yard dash, when Appleton of Malden won from Hall of Huntington a foot. Chandler Woods came home a winner in the 220-yard swim with Harper of Malden second a close second. Stevens of Malden was third man in this event. Huntington won first and second places in the dive and plunge. Hall of Malden was third best man in the dive. Dyar of Huntington plunged 55 feet which was 4 feet better than Butler, the nearest Malden man, who was third to Jones.

HARRISBURG CYCLONES IN GAME AT ROXBURY

The unbeaten Harrisburg Cyclones will show their wares to basketball fans tonight when they play the All-New England basketball five at Roxbury High School Hall. The "All" team is well prepared for the visit of a double bill.

The Massasoit Council, K. of C., will play the Ligonia Council between the halves. These teams are leaders in their league and a merry battle is assured.

* * *

North Quincy Knights of Columbus team will attempt to stop the winning streak of the Boston Council quintet in the Girls' High School, tonight. North Quincy representation has displayed good basketball in games this season. They must be at their best to defeat Boston.

* * *

Franklin fans will witness a stirring contest Tuesday night when the Franklin Whirlwinds will meet the sturdy St. Mary's Catholic Union five of Franklin.

The Whirlwinds, under the management of Sam Snyder, are eager to obtain a return engagement with the Original Celtics.

* * *

The Weymouth A. A. desires games away from home or will exchange games. Weymouth plays at home Fridays. John H. Moran, No. 49 Randall avenue, East Weymouth, is the manager's address.

* * *

The American Glue Company basketball team will journey to the Hingham Naval Training Station today where they will meet the strong navalites. The sailors will be strengthened by the return of "Red" Shannon, who has been out of the lineup because of injuries. Fenton and Levine, forwards; Captain Larson, centre; McNamee and Shannon, backs, and as usual the "Naval Rooters" will make the trip.

The West End All Stars want games with all fast second teams in the 135 to 140-pound class. Manager P. F. Brown, No. 109 Main street, telephone 173-2 Maynard.

BOXING FINDING SUPPORTERS IN COLLEGES

Technology Has 50 on Its Squad, One a Champion at 135 Pounds

Intercollegiate boxing is now finding more and more supporters. At the University of California reports show that 850 men have entered this sport. Princeton comes along with a squad of 250, the Navy has 100, and Tech has 50 men on the squad.

Tech, putting out an array of a half hundred boxers, lacks heavyweights, and may have to exclude that class this season. To offset this disadvantage, the engineers have a dozen men among them who have had much experience, and one is a champion in his class.

R. H. Phillips, who heads the 135-pound list, hails as a New Zealand champion in that division. His New Zealand methods of defence and footshifting have made a hit.

The 125-pound class is not lacking in strong material. Bob Smith, who was with the yearlings last year, has a few knockouts to his credit. Fitz Paul, a veteran of two years, and Cook from the Navy are among the best prospects in the same class.

Among the 115 pounders, Tomavy Ikeraras is at the top of the list, with Lindsley a strong competitor. Captain Ed Mall will defend the 145-pound berth. The other possibilities are Ted Harris and Ten Eyke.

Above this weight Tech lacks good material. Mox and Saver are the most likely candidates for the 158-pound class, and Shultz and Kourier are the strongest contenders at 175 pounds.

PERE MARQUETTES WIN FROM ST. NICK TEAM

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—The Pere Marquette team of Boston defeated the St. Nicholas six at the Ice Palace five goals to four in a United States Amateur League game. The winning tonight's exciting contest the Pere Marquette puck chasers jumped into the league lead.

Dwight was the scoring power of the new English outfit, getting in four of the five goals hungs up by his fast skating team, making its first appearance in the season's schedule here.

The big wingman contributed three goals in rapid order during the heated second period and came through with another in the third. Hurd, a second down for a few minutes in the second period after which he returned to the game, scored the winning goals.

Roy Conley, who was here last year with the Boston shoe Trades team, contributed the fifth goal for the Pere Marquettes in the third period.

The St. Nicholas team started off well by scoring two goals in the first period. Eddie Hill, former Quaker City star, and Herbert Rountree, another member of last year's Quaker City outfit, put over one. Rountree got the first counter on a rebound put his team within a goal of tying the score with Dwight tallied.

The veteran "Red" Synnott, who was a member of the American League team in 1919, was the star on the side lines when Cushman shot the puck home. Synnott had been drawn away from his guarding post. Synnott, although handling a heavy game, he had received, was rushed into the game for the purpose of "breaking" the rule here. Time and time again he drove admirably although Eddie Hill, skating in his usual speedy fashion, took one or two desperate drives at the nets, but with no effectiveness as to scoring.

The Pere Marquettes will mix drills with the Quaker City team at the Ice Palace tonight.

JACK RENAULT AND DAN DOWD FIGURE IN FIASCO

New Bedford, Jan. 14.—After being chased from the ring at the Elm Rink after stalling through four rounds of a scheduled ten-round bout, Jack Renault of this city, former champion of Canada, and Dan Dowd of Boston were matched to go ten rounds once again and at the end of ten dull and uninteresting rounds of light hitting Referee Hennessey called it a draw.

In the first four-round setto neither boxer landed a glove on the other, and after a conference with State Deputy Boxing Commissioner Thomas Hennessey and Jack Fauson called the bout no contest.

Many of the 1,500 fans present demanded their money back and at the request of both managers and club officials the ticket takers were required to re-enter the ring and resume hostilities.

Renault started off the second session at a hot pace, but soon slowed up and together with Dowd stalled through the remaining rounds.

In a scheduled eight-round semi-final bout Chief Big Horse of this city scored a knockout of Young Jack Hilton of Lynn in the fourth round.

Jack Malloy was also awarded a knockout over Tony Thomas of this city in the fourth round of a preliminary, while Young Richards scored a decision over Young Britt of this city.

CHARLEY WHITE DEMANDS BOUT WITH LEONARD

Charley White, who is in Boston to fight Johnny Dundee in a ten-round bout at the Eagle A. A. on [illegible] Monday night believes he has earned a chance at the lightweight championship of the world. But [illegible] anxious to dispose of Benny Leonard.

White gave his [illegible] a recent letter to [illegible] editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Personally we do not want to be put in the position of assisting a Benny Leonard-Charlie White fight for the lightweight championship of the world. But if [illegible] thinks he can lick Charlie Mebbe we still have something to say a out or so before the fight if it takes place.

Have an idea how it will come out but nothing, except that it will be a pippin while it is on. We are going to be there too, if it happens in Akron or Persia. It will be a fight.

Happened to write a story in which we explained a speech Leonard made in Milwaukee the other day telling why he is hard to get matches with. White read it.

Here is appended Charlie's reflection on same:

"My dear Mr. [illegible]

Bogus "Count Gregory" Reveals How He Swindled $50,000 From an Ambitious Mamma

"'Your honor be hanged!' she shouted in a loud voice. 'You were not too honorable to take mother's $50,000. You ought to have given me a blue ribbon among other things in return!'

"I raised my monocle, looked her over coolly, and, bowing low, turned on my heel and walked away. With my disappearance she saw her hopes of meeting Vanderbilt vanish, and she stared after me with a face livid with fury and indignation."

"Hardly had the divorced Duchess of Westminster and her new husband settled themselves in their apartment at the hotel at Cannes when her former husband, the Duke of Westminster, arrived with his new Duchess. As each woman used the title and as neither wished to retreat from the unpleasant situation, it was not surprising that the mail, telegrams and messages for the two rival Duchesses and their rival friends began a merry mix-up, which has been the amusing gossip of London society ever since."

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Here's a J. P. Morgan story which presents him in a new light to the public, who, indeed, regard him as standoffish and cold in his attitude towards ordinary mortals.

The great Oxford University of England, one of the two or three most famous seats of learning in the world, voted to honor the present head of America's leading international banking house by conferring a degree upon him. He was invited to appear on a certain date for the ceremony. His closest friends warmly congratulated "Jack," but when they asked him when he would sail from New York he replied that there were so many people who were anxious to cross the ocean about that time that he didn't feel he ought to do something else, who might have imperative affairs to attend to on the other side, out of a state room. And so he postponed the acceptance of the honor—an honor keenly coveted throughout the world.

* * *

This thoughtful, modest action by the head of the Morgan banking house was contrasted with the pomp and ostentation of the conference which have come to characterize the travels of a certain other international banker and his family. We engage a bewildering series of royal suites and other expensive suites, the total cost of which, along with a number of maids and valets and governesses and other flunkies in attendance, is often headlined in type so large as to be accompanied by photographs calculated to make the public gape. Only, such flaunting of wealth excites something the very opposite of admiration.

* * *

The head of the fourth generation of Morgan bankers was this week admitted to the New York Stock Exchange. The real leader, William P. Hamilton, the Morgan relative who has just retired from the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., has been transferred to young Junius Spencer Morgan.

I learn, however, that there is little likelihood of the new partner's appearance on the floor of the Stock Exchange.

Of the thousands of letters a writer receives there is occasionally one that thrills the emotional chord. Such a writing three paragraphs of a letter comes from a seventy-four-year-old gentleman in Pasadena, Cal., who states that the real reading of something I wrote showing in a favorable way the real character of some of our leading financial men "prized $5,000 more out of me for charity and I have no doubt it will induce many others to turn loose in proportion to their wealth to worthy objects."

I have seen so much of wealthy men and their ways that I know nothing left but contempt for niggardly old misers who exult in adding to their barren pile without ever giving a thought to the good they could do as they journey towards the grave. Men who are willing to find, thank God, they are in the majority—demand one's respect.

This week's Dayton, Ohio, newspapers announce the establishment by the Dayton Foundation by John Patterson, his step-brother and nephew, with initial contributions totalling $245,000. The fund is similar to the Cleveland Foundation and others established in nearly forty large cities. It will form a channel for the wise and valuable record during the World War, perhaps it is not astonishing, therefore, that his young son, Colin Patterson, Jr., is also out to earn his own living, at present as a newspaper man.

General Secretary Mungenast, of the St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce Bureau, writes:

"The writer happens to be one of the many readers who enjoy your daily column. I notice you deplore the lack of aggressiveness on the part of saving institutions in advertising, and I would like to add remarks that you think this condition is national. I thought you might be interested in knowing that here in St. Louis our saving institutions all advertise extensively practically all year round. An example of some of the newspaper copy taken from the daily press of the past week is attached to your letter. Other cities please take notice.

Do the sins of the fathers descend as a blight upon the third and fourth generations? Ask the Erie. Early in its history the Erie was looted and looted and watered—reaped the choicest gang of financial buccaneers who ever infested the public. The poor old Erie has never been cleansed, at any rate not thoroughly.

This week its shares sold at the lowest price they ever touched. The common, of a par value of $100, tumbled to $7; the first preferred to $11.12½; and the second preferred to $7.12½.

Those are bankruptcy prices. But the redoubtable President Underwood indignantly denied that the road is headed for receivership. The Erie has come through so much in the past that it ought to be possible to keep it afloat now.

Stocks Close Strong in New York; Trading Active; Foreign Exchange Higher

AUTO AND OIL ISSUES ARE LEADERS

Price Movement Upward From Opening; Gains Range From Fractions to Six Points

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks closed strong on New York gains ranging from fractions to six points. The largest gain was made by National Lead, which sold at its highest in more than a year. Among other strong issues were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Burns Brothers A and B, Hide and Leather preferred, Chandler, Gulf Steel, Mexican Petroleum, U. S. Realty, Studebaker, Haskell & Barker General Electric, American Woolen, Atlantic Gulf, Baldwin and highest since 1920, and American Tobacco. They had advanced from one to three points. Delaware Petroleum led oils in activity, while most of the trading in motors was in Studebaker and Chandler. Motors and oils were the most active groups. Rails were called higher and closed showed small losses at the end. Steels were quiet and steady on a slightly higher level. Coppers were somber heavy and shiny also.

The market had a strong opening and the price movement was upward all the morning. Most of the realignments were small, fractional movements on the short side. Trading was of good volume for a week-end session, amounting to 350,000 shares during the first hour. Corn Products was a weak issue, selling almost at a point on profit taking. Investment guards stocks in general settlement was more active than a week ago. This was due more to the money situation than to anything else. Bonds were slightly lower on profit taking, particularly Liberty 3½s. Banks are said to have been big buyers of government issues of late. The 3½s pay cent, call rate holds over until Monday. Federal Reserve statement was stronger today and sterling steady.

BOSTON MARKET HAS A STRONG FINISH

The Boston market was irregular at the opening, but gains exceeded losses then as well as at the close strong. High for more than a year were reached by Copper Range, American Pneumatic Service preferred and Warren Brothers second preferred. Calumet and Hecla advanced 2 to 237. Other gains were shown by Boston Elevated, Osceola, St. Mary's Land, U. S. Smelting, American Woolen common, Atlas Tack, Eastern Steamship, Waldorf and Warren Brothers second preferred. Boston & Maine A and B and Warren Brothers were off fractions were down a point at the end. Boston & Maine and New Haven common issues gained a point.

The Curb market was quiet and irregular.

BIG INCREASE IN SALADA TEA SALES

The returns from branches of the Salada Tea Company show for 1921 a phenomenal increase over those prepared with 1920. It has been the policy of the Salada Tea Company, persistently adhered to for more than a quarter of a century, to confine its advertising to newspaper space.

Despite believing in other forms of advertising, President P. C. Larkin insists that until he has exhausted this form he will have recourse to no other medium. The actual increase in sales for 1921 was 2,350,401 pounds.

Foreign Copper Sales

The copper trade has sold about 2,500,000 pounds of copper and has every many and Japan within two days but France, England and Italy are out of the market and domestic demand continues dull. Leading selling agencies quoted electrolytic copper from 13¾ to 14 cents a pound for delivery to the end of March.

Iron and Steel Prices

According to the Iron Age the average price of the principal iron and steel products for the week ended the current week is $44.09, compared with $44.15 the week and $85.04 as a high 1920 average.

WHEN YOU GOT ROAST BEEF FOR 15 CENTS

Spillane, Harking Back to Bill-of-Fare of 1887, Shows 200 Per Cent. Rise

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—There used to be in this city of Philadelphia a restaurant in South Second street opposite the old Chamber of Commerce Building, which was patronized by some of the leading men in the shipping and grain business.

An advertisement of that restaurant appears in the Philadelphia Maritime Directory of 1887. Read it. Study the prices.

Roast lamb, 2 vegetables, bread, butter 15c

200 PER CENT. ADVANCE.

Records are not available covering the wholesale and retail prices of all foodstuffs in 1887, but from those of 1920, which are available, the following items, such as flour, beef, poultry, etc., it would appear the advance is not more than 200 per cent.

In fact 175 would be closer.

If you can get a good restaurant prices today are three or four times more than they were in 1887, you can explain many things in connection with the present cost of living.

And read the prices of today compared with restaurant prices of 1887 (or at least about the difference). It wasn't customary in 1887 for everyone to tip. Today the tip in any but the cheapest of restaurant averages about what you paid for roast beef, vegetables, bread and butter in the old days.

The times are out of joint surely when one meal now costs more than three did thirty-five years ago.

There must have been a fair margin of profit in it or the restaurant man would not have remained in business. How he did it on such prices as those in the bill of fare printed above is difficult to understand.

Was the restaurant man of today explain it?

DEALING WITH CRIME.

America's methods of dealing with crime are about the crudest of any in the world. No one has been executed in Philadelphia for a murder since B. Fosdick's address at the City Club yesterday can doubt this. Mr. Fosdick was Commissioner of Accounts in New York city when he was there that he has investigated the police systems of practically all the cities of Europe and in America. Recently he made a survey of Cleveland in this regard. It was the most refreshed survey that he spoke yesterday.

Mr. Fosdick is not a crusader. He is an investigator and he offered plans. He is not hostile to policemen, to officers of the law, or to courts, but shows the utter inefficiency of the system under which they operate in the handling of crime. He doesn't criticize highly of the Civil Service machinery as applied to this branch of government. More crimes are committed in the name of civil service, he says, than we know.

He is a remarkably able speaker. He knows more about crime than perhaps any other man of the age in this country and he presents his facts in an orderly, dispassionate manner. He does not assert that when from his investigations, but lets you draw your own from the facts he lays before you.

He stirred his hearers so thoroughly yesterday that there was a general expression of belief that Philadelphia ought to have a survey such as the one in Cleveland.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Jan. 14. — Stocks showed a notable increase in activity Friday, and the improvement in tone and sentiment was even more marked. Friday, the thirteenth, passed without the slightest semblance of uneasiness, despite the addition of the Penn-Central crisis to the element of market superstition. As a matter of fact, this trading element appeared to take the same view of the episode that is commonly entertained regarding airplanes—that it is dangerous nerves to sell on, simply because a rapid change for the better might be expected at any time.

MOREOVER, the continued ease of money, with the ruling rate at 3½ per cent., and the sharp jump in the Federal Reserve ratio to the new high level of 74.7 furnished offsetting factors of too pronounced a character to be ignored. The statement of the Consolidated Gravure Furnishes ample evidence of the country's financial solidarity, as well as the explanation for the decline in rates.

OILS, steels, rails, motors and numerous specialties divided attention among the trading element. New high levels were reached by the Corn Products, People's Gas, Computing, Tabulating and Recording, and one or two other miscellaneous issues.

MUCH interest was taken in the strength displayed by Chandler and Studebaker, the leaders of the motor group, in connection with the encouraging report from the automobile show. Chandler sales are said to have been unexpectedly large. The favorable items in the budget of automobile gossip—more than offset—the recent imposition of price cuts by the Ford and Hupp Motor Companies.

PEOPLE'S GAS, Public Service Cor- poration of New Jersey and other utilities were strong. The street car shipments reflected a disposition on the part of recent sellers to reverse their position. This applied, also, to the new issues, such as Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and others of that class which are known to be sponsored by powerful bankers were bought steadily at advancing prices.

CHANDLER MOTORS was the strong feature of the motor group. Accumulation, on powerful scale, was seen in progress for some months, and all offerings below 50 were absorbed by the trade on the break. There is no confidence now to say that Chandler sales during the present New York show will not already exceed the total sales for eight months last year. During the first week in December, recently, four weeks passed when Chandler did not ship a car. In two weeks recently 1,000 cars were shipped, and orders now assure large operations for a long time to come.

STUDEBAKER followed Chandler rather than led it in the advance. Studebaker earnings have proved more than satisfactory to those committed to the constructive side of this stock. These earnings are such as to give room to repeat that when the directors meet the last week of this month, some action may be taken by the directors on the disbursement. In usually well-informed quarters, reports of extra payment are said to be taken seriously, but those responsible for the market movement of the issue have sufficient confidence in the communication to rout the very extensive short interest that exists.

A WEEK ago the first reports of an advance by the International Paper Corporation of New Jersey, a usually inactive issue, were circulated. The stock during the week has added eight points, and it is understood that between 80 and 82 is the figure at the present move. Buying is based on expectation of an increase in the dividend rate from 4 to 6 per cent. annually.

ONE large wire house in referring to the general market situation said, "for the great majority of stocks we are in a traders' market." The paradox in Wall street in which traders make no money."

THE rails were strong, with Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Lehigh Valley prominent among the leaders of this group, making new high prices for the movement. The continued ease of money, also, has brought a large amount of investment buying into the Union Pacific, Atchison and roads of that class. The advance in Reading is due to the approach of the time when the directors will declare the segregation plan. The opinion is expressed confidently that this decision will be favorable to the holders of the common stock.

THE raw sugar market was featured by the entry of British and Japanese buyers, who took large quantities at the recent low price level. All offerings below two cents were withdrawn with the result that the movement in the trade is much more optimistic than in months. Refiners in the American Sugar Refining sold at 60, which was within a fraction of its recent high. Profit-taking caused a one point reaction before the close.

ANNOUNCEMENT that the Ford Motor Company will reduce the price of its cars January 15 was responsible for the selling in some of the motor stocks. There is a general belief that mergers of a number of the smaller companies will be consummated during the year as a matter of self-preservation. The entry of Ford interests into Lincoln holdings is taken in the trade to mean a widening of the field of Ford competition.

EVANS' OUTLOOK FOR 1922 IS NOT BRIGHT

Financial Expert Can See No Enterprise, No Creation of New Things

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—It is a question of waiting for customers to come to your shop, and also of waiting and hearing talk from the railroad companies about equipment to be bought from the manufacturers, with the certainty still there now along that the roads will take their time about paying; or listening to the prices of Western farm lands as they slowly move down; or nervous irritation over the bickering between labor or capital; of material purchases that have been made in the past few months, some of them at much lower prices than those now prevailing.

This is a part of the picture that one sees in looking ahead into 1922. There will be no edge, no enterprise, no moving forward, no creation of new things, but the extension of manufacturing plants.

PATIENCE IS NECESSARY.

The Federal taxation system will still be there, and many taxes will be passed, the debts of Europe to us will remain unpaid, the burden of Europe and the rest of mankind will be borne by producers of goods in American citizen. Profits will be gleaned in small quantities.

The multitudes of patience will be necessary, also new measurements of volume and character and quality of business, for the most not yet fully recovered from the habit of estimating the business of the year loosely point. Exercising patience and figuring on small amounts in commercial lines, particularly, is not a good habit of a bore, but this process of spiritual discipline is something we must go through.

Manufacturers, commerce and the trades will continue going to the microscope and the view will be very different from that which we got when one used the naked eye or telescope to the eye. You have seen a drunken man trying to walk off into the distance and then a sober man unlimitedly, but also you have seen the latter inwardly rejoicing in the earth when it thumped up against him. Something of the sort we have been in between periods of people who people have discovered or are discovering solids.

UNMANAGEABLE LARGELY OVER.

It requires the making of new things such as ships and railroads and electric plants to make active times, and the making of unmaking things we call the times bad.

We may congratulate ourselves that a large percentage of unmanageable has been achieved. It is a question now of finishing the job and in spite of the fact that it is really helpful in many ways, the forecasters are making we are in a rather dreary expectancy. We daily expect to read of unusually reports of failures prompt us from time to time.

That is owing to the speculative mind, whether it is contemplating the manufacturing or the trade. We see the time when the things prophesied by the stock market in the past will happen, for these enhanced prices of stocks do mean the opinion of stockholders and bright speculators that there is a revival of business somewhere down the road.

In a degree the anticipations of these prophets have already been realized. Many lines of business, formerly neglected or discredited, were named months ago as the first to score upward. It was safer than some of the odd standbys of business, and they have treated the forecasters very well.

A HOPEFUL AUGURY.

It is noticeable that many stocks previously little bought on the rather eagerly picked up by Chicago traders, and their advance may be set down as a hopeful augury, in so much as these issues have been bought by people close to the business of the country and by investors rather than those listed on the New York Stock Exchange. One may mention Pick, Wahl and Stewart-Warner, the latter name first brought into prominence by the participation by the French in the peace spirit which was pervasive so many of the people of the earth.

The movement to aid European sentiment in regard to peace and the old methods of recasting the map the world, which brought on the war, was also a result of a messback as the veriest Bourbon.

Oversea Gold Movement

Department of Commerce reports as to the oversea gold movement last month and during last year give December gold imports as $31,684,978, against $44,000,483 in December, 1920, and exports as $2,000,000, against $17,005,287. For the year 1921 gold imports aggregated $491,267,446, against $417,048,373 in 1920. Gold exports in 1921 aggregated $23,640,045, against $380,504,000 in 1920.

Rail and Trade Items

August 1921 this country exported 229,000 pairs of boots & skin of over 160 per cent, to eight years. Exports of purchases were 35 per cent. more last year than in 1913.

During the December 31 week, oversea freight car loadings totaled 531,004 cars, a decrease of 71,304 compared with the corresponding week last year and a reduction of 18,485 cars compared with the previous week in 1920.

Rail earnings in this country last year approximated 140,000 many tracks were manufactured, a decline of 35 per cent. compared with 1920 when production totaled 225,000. The 1921 output was the

MRS. LYDIG TO WED REV. DR. GRANT SOON

Announcement of Marriage Date to Noted Rector to Be Made Within Week

New York, Jan. 14.—"An announcement of the date of the marriage of Mrs. Lydig to the Rev. Dr. Percy S. Grant will be made within a week."

This statement was made to a reporter for the Boston American by a spokesman for Mrs. Lydig, the beautiful divorcee and social leader.

At the same time Mrs. Lydig and Dr. Grant denied the rumors circulated that their romance had been shattered and their engagement broken at any time. The reason the marriage did not take place in the Fall as scheduled was not made public.

The engagement, which was announced last Summer, presented a serious problem to the authorities of the Episcopal Church. Such a union, according to many, would be a direct violation of the Episcopal Canon Law, which forbids the marriage of divorced persons.

KOCHANSKI HAS SOLO ROLE AT SYMPHONY

Russian Violinist Makes Indifferent Impression for Tone and Technique

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Paul Kochanski, a Russian violinist, newly come to these shores, was the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday.

The young man had some harrowing experiences at the hands of the Bolshevists, according to his publicity, being forced to play at free concerts in St. Petersburg, Kiev and elsewhere and being paid in food tickets instead of money. On his attempt to leave Russia he was arrested and sentenced to serve as professor in the Conservatory of that city, presumably for more food tickets.

HE GOT AWAY.

But, somehow, he got away from there and reached London where he played with the London Symphony Orchestra. In New York he appeared with the Symphony Society, and now he is here with us.

He played the Bruch Fantasia on Scottish airs, a good old standby of violinists everywhere, in a fairly creditable violin work, but an affront to every Scotchman because the stolid German chapelmeister, Max Bruch, distorted the good Scotch tunes to suit himself with sublime disregard for the fact that they would sound all wrong to ears familiar with the melodies.

Despite the affection of the Bolshevists and the ease with which he gets engagements with great symphony orchestras, Kochanski left on me as a very indifferent fiddler, a man whose tone had no special distinction and whose technique was nothing unusual.

NOT A WELL-PLAYED WALTZ.

"La Valse," a choreographic poem by Ravel, was performed for the first time in Boston. The waltz, though loso frightfully when played as concert pieces. Making all allowances for the Symphonic orchestrator's ingenuity, "La Valse" sounded like a Strauss waltz played by a bad band, all of whose instruments were out of tune and most of whose members couldn't play.

Schonberg's "Radiant Night," a sextet for strings, was the best thing on the program. It is atmospheric music which suggests what the composer wished the title to, and a remarkable piece of instrumentation.

VAN EMDEN RECITAL.

In Harriet Van Emden we have a singer of qualities that are most musical. She will appear in Jordan Hall next Wednesday evening, January 18. She will have as her program a display of her workmanlike musicianship in an exceedingly well balanced program, opening the floor with a group of classical songs—following down through the second group to Brahms and Strauss and then a group of English songs, including one by a Boston composer, Charles W. Manney, "Consecration," and a second by Percy Grainger "The Sprig of Thyme."

From the reports that have reached us regarding Van Emden's recitals, Boston music lovers should have an enjoyable evening of song upon this occasion.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

Kate Ryan, for many years a member of the old Boston Stock Company and in recent years associated with the Craig Players, has been especially engaged by the management of the Somerville Theatre to appear in a revival of "The Valley of Dan Mathews," announced as the attraction for a week, beginning the Somerville Players. This play, which is dramatized from the popular novel of the same name, written by Harold Bell Wright, is possessed of a story of tremendous appeal and the characters are those that one meets in every-day life. The production will be made in the splendid manner that characterized the road tour of this popular success, headed by Arthur Byron, who will essay the role of Dan Mathews.

FAMOUS OLD DRAMA ON SCREEN

Movie fans and those who are fond of the classics of the American stage are in for a treat when Pauline's old melodrama, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," is shown at the Globe Theatre for a limited engagement, starting Monday afternoon, January 23. This famous old play has been made into a super special. The story of "Ten Nights in a Barroom" is familiar to almost everyone and its original great success both as a novel and play. It has been on the boards for over sixty years and is said to have played in every city and town in the country.

Therefore, it is no surprising thing the always enterprising movie producers found it a splendid material for a most unusual feature. Co-starring the wide range of the photoplay permits of a splendid array of star vers on that the stage could give

MAJESTIC THEATRE

Shubert Vaudeville will have one of its most distinctive bills for the coming week, beginning Monday afternoon next. Homer B. Mason and Marguerite Keeler in the sketch entitled "Married," by Porter Emerson Brown, well known as the author of the Brookbrook Blinn's capital play, "The Red Man."

Another headliner will be Carl McCullough, the popular musical comedy star, in a few bright minutes of travesty. A return engagement will be played by Belle Story, America's foremost lady juggler, and the latest prima donna of the New York Hippodrome.

William Horlick and the Sampsons sisters in "A Dancing Symphony," one of the prettiest and most enjoyable acts in vaudeville, will present a feast in a few bright minutes. Horlick is a former dancing partner of Pavlowa and for his Shubert Vaudeville engagement will have a special array of dancing numbers with the Sampsons Sisters that are quite unique.

BUSES MAY REPLACE STREET CARS IN N. Y.

New York, Jan. 14.—Mayor Hylan plans to have buses replace street railways in Manhattan, it was learned when it was announced that a public hearing will be held on January 27. A limited bus system plan also has been mapped out for the borough of Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx. An outlay of $35,000,000 a contemplated.

SEND IN YOUR VOTE, MAY WIN A PRIZE

WHICH comic series in the Boston American do you like BEST?
Which comic series in the Boston American do you like LEAST?

The Boston American will give fifty original drawings to its readers who write the best letters on the above subject.

Each of the fifty winners may designate his favorite series, and an original drawing by that artist will be his winner.

Everybody is eligible.

The letter must be divided into two parts—the first part devoted to the writer's opinion of the comic series which the participant regards as best, and the second part to the comic series which the voter regards as least meritorious.

A voting blank is printed herewith.

Use that with your letter. The test will end on February 5. Men, women and children are eligible. Only one vote and letter permitted to each participant.

All letters should be addressed to the Comic Editor Boston American, 60 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Letters may be either written in pen and ink or typewritten on one side of paper.

Let's have your letter and vote at once.

KAPLAN, FORMER DRY AGENT, IS INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury Returns True Bill for Violation of Prohibition Law

Former "dry" agent Louis Kaplan of Le Roy street, Dorchester, was one of seventy-two defendants named in the list of fifty-six true bills which were returned by the Federal Grand Jury, Marton, Jr., of the Federal Court by the Federal Grand Jury for violations of the prohibition law.

This is the second time that Kaplan has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury, he having been indicted in October, 1920, while a prohibition officer, for unlawfully carrying on the business of a distiller. Kaplan was appointed to the prohibition forces by former Prohibition Enforcement Agent William J. McCarthy, while the Federal violation charge was pending against him. This indictment was eventually nol prossed.

LEFT SERVICE IN JUNE.

Kaplan's services were dispensed with by the prohibition department in June, 1921. It is believed that this was due to his testimony in a liquor case before U. S. Commissioner Hitchcock which varied greatly from the testimony of the other "dry" agents in the case.

The latest indictment against Kaplan charges him on September 15 last with unlawfully transporting five gallons of alcohol on an auto truck in Boston. The discovery of the alcohol was due to the chauffeur of truck coming in collision with an electric car.

An officer arrived soon after the collision and on examining the auto truck is alleged to have discovered the alcohol. Kaplan was on the truck at the time and was taken into custody.

3 SECRET INDICTMENTS.

Besides the fifty-six true bills the jury returned three secret indictments and about 160 "no bills" for violation of the prohibition law.

Assistant United States Attorney White, who presented the cases for the jury's deliberation, in speaking about 125 cases of the "no bills," said that these were brought because of the fact that the "dry" agents were also acting in the dual capacity of deputy collectors of internal revenue.
